Marcus Loew.
Who Will Be the Man?
A New Road to Rome.
Happy Wall Street.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—
Copyright, 1927.

MARCUS LOEW'S death is a loss to the world's happiness. His friends must find comfort in remembering that he gave pleasure to millions.

Replacing thousands of liquor saloons with hundreds of cheerful theaters, he provided relaxation, pleasant, instructive amusement.

He was a good American, as simple, sincere, unpretentious in prosperity as he had been in years of hard poverty. His able associates will carry on his work and investors in his institution will be protected.

MARCUS LOEW himself, always cheerful, a real friend, more worried about the welfare of others than about his own, cannot be replaced.

What Samuel Johnson said of the death of Garrick may truly be said of Marcus Loew.

"His death eclipsed the gaiety of nations, and impoverished the public stock of harmless pleasure."

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES is back from Europe, with "nothing to say to reporters," a dangerous sign with a national convention near.

Mr. Hughes never said, "I am too old to be President." That would be preposterous, from one of the most hard working men in public life. He did say, "I am too old TO RUN for President."

SECRETARY MELLON is back from Europe, also "with nothing to say to reporters."

Secretary Mellon was walking up Park avenue in New York City yesterday afternoon, looking about half his age and going at a rate that would have taken him from his desk in the Treasury building to the front door of the White House in considerably less than a minute and a half.

NOW is the time to pick your candidate, with President Coolidge "not choosing," which means that he does not intend to be a candidate.

Hoover, Mellon, Hughes, Lowden or a dark horse, who will it be?

W. R. HEARST'S all-metal airplane, built by Fokker, hopped off from Old Orchard, Maine, yesterday, on a trip to Rome. Lloyd Bertaud is in command, but his fellow pilot, J. D. Hill, won the toss and guided the giant ship starting from the New World to the Old City.

A new road leads to Rome now, the wide road of the air.

BUSH PICKS HILL TO OPPOSE REDS

While Donie Bush and his flag-chasers have enough civic pride to wish a certain amount of enjoyment for the Cincinnati boys as they sojourn in Pittsburgh, the Oaklanders are more than anxious to "knock the Reds for a row" this afternoon as Jack Hendricks' team makes it season's farewell bow to Pirate fandom.

The double setback handed the Pirates in the Labor Day games left a sting that was not altogether removed from a pleasing Pittsburgh success of yesterday. The sting, however, will be well nigh obliterated if the Buccos are able to give the Rhinelanders a sound thrashing today.

A duel of righthanders is in the offing in the finale of the series.

Sea Engulfs Old Glory

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—(AP.)—A hasty search of a 30-mile area around the estimated spot in the North Atlantic from which the monoplane Old Glory sent its dramatic SOS shortly before dawn today, has failed to reveal the plane and its three occupants. The hunt has now turned to the spot where the plane was last sighted.

Old Glory's SOS

The text of Old Glory's call for help as copied on the steamer Transylvania was:
"WRHP SOS five hours out of Newfoundland."
(WRHP was the Old Glory's wireless call.)

Capt. David W. Bone, master of the Cunard-Anchor liner Transylvania, whose wireless picked up the SOS at 4:17 a. m., Pittsburgh daylight time, quickly estimated the position of Old Glory at the time the SOS was sent. He sent the Transylvania ploughing through rough seas and fresh winds and circled about the spot, but saw nothing.

RETRACES PLANE'S ROUTE

Having searched the area from which the SOS was believed sent Capt. Bone then sent his vessel coursing through the seas to a spot where the Cunarder-Anchor liner California sighted Old Glory, then in the air speeding toward Rome at 100 miles an hour, at 12:57 Pittsburgh daylight time this morning, or 4:57 Greenwich mean time. Capt. Bone estimated the position of Old Glory at the time the SOS was sent as latitude 49.20 north, longitude 41.00 west, some 500 miles east-northeast of the tip of Newfoundland.

The liners Lapland and Carmania, also sailing westward, picked up the

M'KEESPORT GIRL, 18, KIDNAPED, SAYS UNCLE

That Ella Eicher, pretty 18-year-old McKeesport High School girl, who disappeared mysteriously yesterday after leaving her classroom, was kidnaped, is the belief expressed today by relatives who asked Pittsburgh police to aid in a search for her.

Yesterday was her first day this semester at the McKeesport Technical High School. She was a senior and had been enthusiastic, it is said, about renewing her studies. Arriving at school she went to her report room. A few minutes later she walked out. There has been no trace of her since.

The girl lived with an uncle, Matthew Eicher, at 3009 Atcheson street,

2ND SHOT, DYING, IN MOON RUN ATTACK

Two non-union miners were shot, one killed and the other probably fatally wounded, in the McKees Rocks road, near the Moon Run mine of the Pittsburgh Coal Company at dawn today, when they refused to become union members, county detectives said this afternoon. Their assailant, said to be a union picket, fled. The shooting occurred at a lonely spot and the assassin escaped.

George Nahi, also known as James Toots, 39, of 444 Railroad street, Munhall, was killed, and Joseph Vargo, 34, also of Munhall, is in the Ohio Valley Hospital, reported dying.

The men, both of foreign birth, had been working at the Moon Run mine. Nahi quit Monday night and Vargo quit last night. They were on their

Mellon Not Candidate, He Says

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.
Washington Correspondent of The Sun-Telegraph.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 7.—Returning to his office today for the first time since his recent cruise abroad, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon explained clearly that he does not wish to be regarded in any sense as a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination.

With a single sentence he sought to scotch the boom that has been launched in his behalf by friends since the cryptic statement of President Coolidge that he did not "choose" to run.

"There is nothing serious about my boom," Mr. Mellon said. "I am not a factor and do not wish to be so considered."

The statement of the treasury department head came in reply to a barrage of questions hurled at him by Washington correspondents during his first press conference since returning to the capitol. Looking in the pink of condition, Mr. Mellon asked to be excused from extensive comment on the national political situation as it has developed in conse-

TULLY HOPS OFF, UNAWARE OF OLD GLORY FATE

NOTE PUT ABOARD PLANE

HARBOR GRACE, N. F., Sept. 7.—(AP.)—Capt. Jerry Tully and Lieut. James Medcalf took the air in their plane, the Sir John Carling, from the airport here early today, unaware that the Old Glory had sent out an SOS call and that her fate was in doubt. But it was made certain that they should know about the call soon after they flew out over the Atlantic on their way to London.

Apparently the authorities failed to tell Tully and Medcalf directly about what had happened, for fear that it would have a bad effect on the spirit of confidence in which they entered their plane. They believed, however, that it was best to let them know of the SOS message after they were under way, so they wrote a brief and inserted it in the ase, where they would d it on opening the case heir charts.

Tully and Medcalf, off for England after many delays, were cheerful before the start and said they expected to eat lunch in London tomorrow. Their plane made a perfect takeoff at 7:25 a. m., eastern standard time, and disappeared over Cape St. Francis, 30 miles away.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 7.—(AP.)—The monoplane Royal Windsor, which took off from Old Orchard, Me., before dawn for Windsor, England, with a stop planned at Harbor Grace, was last sighted this morning at 8:45 eastern standard time, 15 miles south of Glasgow.

After being seen above Glengarry, no further reports were heard of her progress during the morning hours. A possible explanation of this was seen in the fact that the plane was flying very high, and it was thought it might have become hidden from the earth by atmospheric conditions.

Democrat, who contested his election, attended.

Of the Reed committee, Senator James A. Reed, Democrat, Missouri, and Robert M. LaFollette, Republican, Wisconsin, were present. All of the elections committee members here are Democrats. They are: Senators T. H. Caraway, Arkansas; W. S. George, Georgia; M. N. Neely, West Virginia, and H. G. Stevens, Mississippi.

Senator Reed explained before the conference opened that it was necessary to determine what action could be taken to retain the Pennsylvania ballots as under the law of that state they might be destroyed next week.

Ballots from Philadelphia and Allegheny county have been impounded by the Senate but the election committee's efforts to obtain ballots from five other counties failed. A Federal district judge has, however, restrained officials in three of the counties from destroying the ballots.

"It would be a tremendous task if it would be necessary for us to seek court orders against 5,000 or 6,000 county officials and election officers," said Senator Reed.

He indicated the committees would seek to have the disputing party specify the counties whose returns he contested.

Vare, it was understood, had not listed the counties in which he want-

The telegram from Senator Keyes to Senator James E. Watson, Republican, Indiana, chairman of the elections committee, was laid before the conference. It was forwarded by Watson who is confined in a hospital at Rochester, Minn.

Senator Keyes asserted Pennsylvania should preserve its own ballots until the issue has been settled. He offered to introduce a resolution at the next session of Congress to cover the expense to which Pennsylvania would be put.

THE A. E. F. -:- GOES BACK TO -:- "THAT GAY PAREE"

ON TO PARIS

These legionnaires began the campaign of 1927 at Cherbourg when tenders conveyed them from the SS. President Harding to the dock. They greeted the once familiar sight of French soil with lusty cheers and, after, you suspect, buying up the town moved on to Paris for their stay in that dear capital, where they expect hearty times.

"FORWARR-R-D, MARCH!"

And marching up the quay they went, to take over the country and the city in which 10 years ago they were heroes—heroes as Lafayette had been a hero, the succor of a nation. They steamed past the Goddess of Liberty roaring "Over There," so who will say that their marching song at Cherbourg is not "Mademoiselle from Armentieres?"

and for to see and to write about it. The flight had been carefully planned, by the Southern route via the Azores of which route Lindbergh said to this writer: "That is the way to go. By that route transatlantic flying in the future will be done."

SOON after you read this Bertaud and Hill, courageous pilots, will be talking to their Italian friends, De Pinedo and Noblie, and Philip Payne will be giving the details to Mussolini.

[The above was written before the SOS message from Old Glory was received.]

LABOR DAY is past, and now begins the real new year, for those that will get ahead, all the glorious "go-getter" family. Everything seems cheerful in the world of business, every prospect pleases.

WALL STREET gentlemen that toil not, neither do they spin, yet make Solomon in all his glory look like an odd lot buyer, went to bed last night as happy as so many Sinbads in the Diamond Valley. A stock exchange seat had sold for $230,000, a new high price, and a long line of stocks had established new high price records, "spontaneously."

THE public "came in," shaking their woolly locks at the ticker, and poor bears were cuffed around by General Motors, U. S. Steel, Railroads, Industrials, etc., once more.

The Treasury makes clear its opinion that a long period of "easy plentiful money" is ahead. The business boom season of 1927-28 now starts. The wise man will also start.

INNOCENT George Bernard Shaw, who has not kept up with his period, says people don't run their government any more than an audience manages the theater. The people "only pick the ruler." They do nothing of the kind. They vote when voting time comes, after gentlemen representing industrial and financial genius "pick the ruler" for whom the people shall vote.

It is not a thing to worry you. Power always rules, and at this moment, power resides in industry and finance. They rule here, in every European country except Russia, and will soon rule there.

It is inevitable, and perhaps the best possible arrangement. Providence knows best.

ALLEGED KIDNAPED BOY RETURNS TO PITTSBURGH

WHEELING, W. Va., Sept. 7.—George Stanislaus, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Stanislaus, Sr., 1016 Fritz street, Pittsburgh, who told Moundsville police that he had been kidnaped by two men in an automobile, was taken back home today. The boy said the men, who were en route to Florida, did not molest him. He said he fled from the car when the men left it for a few minutes in Moundsville.

quence of President Coolidge's renunciation.

"TALKED POLITICS"

He admitted that he and former secretary of state Charles Evans Hughes discussed "politics" on their return from Europe aboard the same vessel, but added that he preferred not to give any views of his own.

In his opinion President Coolidge was entirely sincere in making the announcement of his intention not to seek the nomination again, but he declined comment as to whether the Chief Executive is out of the race.

Secretary Mellon told Washington correspondents that his trip abroad, spent mostly in cruising in the Mediterranean with his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. David K. E. Bruce, was enjoyed immensely. The trip was for recreation, he said.

OHIO FARMER HAS TOO MANY TEETH

BELLAIRE, O., Sept. 7.—Jacob Dorst has an extra set of teeth on his hands and doesn't know what to do about it. The teeth, many times the size of a human's, were found on a farm at Round Bottom and, according to Dorst, nothing like them has ever been seen.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 7.—In ill health, Mrs. Ida Mae Ayers, 58, of Export, mother of eight, shot herself through the heart in the kitchen of her home. She fired three shots. One shattered a wall mirror, another pierced the ceiling and the third was fatal. She leaves her husband, George Ayers, five daughters and three sons.

Old Glory Prepared For Landing at Sea

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Sept. 7.—(AP.)—A collapsible rubber lifeboat, an emergency dump valve in its gasoline tanks and a supply of flares and rockets carried by the monoplane Old Glory were cited by aviation officials here today as a basis for the belief that the occupants of the plane had a chance of saving themselves if they were forced down at sea.

Lloyd W. Bertaud, one of the pilots on the plane, tested the boat in Long Island Sound a few weeks ago when it was found to operate satisfactorily. The boat can hold at least two men.

The boat is carried in a bag and was placed in the plane within easy reach of the fliers. The boat is inflated by an air pump and is propelled by collapsible oars.

The main gas tank, with a capacity of 830 gallons, could be emptied and filled with air in 45 seconds by means of an emergency valve which can be operated from the pilot's or the navigator's compartments. In an emergency landing on water the air-filled tank has a buoyancy equal to two tons and would keep the ship afloat for some time.

Although flares and rockets were carried on the Old Glory, it was thought here they would be of little service since day was breaking at sea when the plane sent out its distress call.

Hijackers Held For Court

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 7.—An intermixture of bootlegging and hijacking on the part of four alleged Canton (O.) and Pittsburgh (Pa.) liquor law violators was dealt with summarily today by U. S. Commissioner H. K. Cochrane.

After hearing the story of the Pittsburgh men, Joseph Krismanich and Joseph Margolina, to the effect that they had been hijacked by Arthur C. Lucas and Harry Eggleston, of Canton, Cochrane bound the four over to the Federal grand jury under bond of $7,500 each.

The Pittsburgh pair alleged they arranged for the sale and delivery of a quantity of liquor to the Canton men only to have the liquor taken away without remuneration.

"You men better join the union," the latter is alleged to have said. Nahi and Toots began an explanation for their refusal to enter the union ranks.

Without further words the stranger drew a gun and shot both.

A man who heard the shots went to the spot and in the darkness found the wounded man pinioned under the dead body of Nahi. Nahi had been shot in the spine, abdomen and face. Vargo was hit in the back, abdomen and head.

The attack occurred at a lonely spot in the road near St. Mary's Cemetery. It was at 5:40 o'clock and at that time the valley was filled with fog and very dark, giving the killer a chance to escape without being observed.

M'KEESPORT GIRL KIDNAPED

McKeesport. Her mother is dead. Her father, J. T. Eicher, is supervisor of the West Penn Railway Company at Connellsville.

She is 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighing 135 pounds, has fair complexion and dark eyes and dark curly hair. She always has been popular with boys, but her uncle, in telling police of her disappearance, said she never had "steady company."

In school she was a leader in activities and a member of debate and dramatic societies.

Ella went to school yesterday with Myra Hopkins, a neighbor. They were to have met at noon, but Miss Hopkins saw nothing of Ella after they had separated in the building.

The girl carried $20, allowance money for amusement and clothes, her uncle said.

Brock's Plane at Rangoon

RANGOON, Burma, Sept. 7.—(AP.)—William S. Brock and Edward F. Schlee arrived here at 2:18 o'clock this afternoon from Calcutta, India, on their round-the-world flight.

The Pride of Detroit landed on the race course at 2:18 o'clock this afternoon. She covered the distance from Calcutta at an average speed of 100 miles an hour.

The aviators reported that half an hour after their departure from Calcutta they encountered bad monsoon weather, with strong cross winds and continuous heavy rains for two and a half hours. Later they found the weather pretty good. The machine behaved well.

The fliers plan to continue their journey tomorrow.

The world fliers, according to plans announced in Calcutta yesterday, intend to fly from Rangoon to Bangkok, Siam, and then to Hanoi, French Indo-China. From then on their stops will be Hongkong, Shanghai, Tokio and Midway Island and Honolulu on the way back to the United States. Their trip will end at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, where they took off on August 27.

Schlee told the newspapermen in Calcutta that they had hoped to circle the world in 22 days, but that they believed this no longer possible, in view of the delays they have encountered. They hoped with luck, however, to better the record round-the-world trip of 28 days 14 hours.

OLD GLORY ENGULFED BY SEA

SOS and were participating in the general search.

MAN RACING ELEMENTS

Darkness moved westward over the rain-swept Atlantic this afternoon while the Carmania and the Transylvania sped along the supposed route of Old Glory in an effort to rescue her crew of three before nightfall arrived.

It was a race of the elements against man and his machines. If the hurrying darkness spread across the ocean before either vessel reached Old Glory, the likelihood of rescue would become slight.

Masters of both vessels radioed that they had received Old Glory's SOS and that they were searching. They indicated that they would maintain the search until nightfall.

The United States Navy hydrographic office today said Old Glory must have been just south of the center of a severe rainstorm when her SOS was broadcast at 4:09 a. m. (Pittsburgh daylight time) today. Rains were general over the Atlantic, the Navy said.

Tribute "We Follow" Dropped in Ocean Just Before SOS

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—(AP.)—The bitter irony of fate was seen today in a message dropped into the sea from the monoplane Old Glory a few hours before ships picked up the SOS message that told of the plane's distress.

When Old Glory left the Maine coast yesterday it carried, to be dropped into the sea off Newfoundland, a wreath in honor of the memory of Nungesser and Coli. French aviators who attempted the perilous westward passage and were never heard from. A message attached to the wreath read:

"Nungesser and Coli. You showed the way. We followed, Bertaud and Hill and Payne."

Presumably the wreath and message were dropped according to plan about midnight and only a few hours later was heard the grim SOS, which indicated that perhaps the fliers were indeed following the way of Nungesser and Coli in a manner they had not meant.

X marks the spot where Billy B. faltered near the finish line to complain that his opponents were doing what Sharkey said Dempsey did, but the cheers of the spectators awakened him to his responsibility and he turned to win the stakes, $5,870. The victory over a 75-foot course was in the fastest recorded time of 1 minute, 28 seconds. Buddy, owned by Bobby Barger, 6, won second money in the stirring finish, and Mike, an agile terrapin was finally persuaded to go in to third place. Mike belongs to a girl stenographer. It was the greatest turtle derby in history. Rumors that Lon Chaney planned to run brought a strict examination of the entrants. Slow motion movie cameramen were barred from the race grounds.

3 Hit Sawdust Trail For Child Evangelist

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY.

"A girl has a perfect right to make herself look attractive, To wear pretty gowns and powder her nose a bit if it shines—providing she doesn't make herself look artificial and freakish."

"Out of the mouth of babes"—sage advice from Uldine Utley. And she adds:

"God made beauty and he expects us to make ourselves as beautiful as possible. He put beauty in nearly everything in the world. I don't use makeup because I don't like it and I don't feel it would do me a bit of good. But I don't condemn another girl for prettying herself up if she doesn't do it too vainly and think about her looks above other more important things."

Uldine's first converts hit the sawdust trail last night. An old gray-haired man, a young white sheik and a colored young man. Seven held up their hands and asked for prayer, but only the three failed to resist the 15-year-old child's pleading that they go all the way toward showing they meant to lead a new life.

Uldine was bitterly disappointed with the crowd. It was much smaller than before. One could tell by her manner that it distressed her. She is used to packed houses, and thousands instead of a few hundreds.

For the fourth time she preached, holding her audience spellbound without a single note. She uses her Bible only. And she knows it like her a, b, c's. It is worn to shreds.

Five little girls and a little boy not more than 7 sat in the front row, spellbound, hanging on her every word. Their rapt attention was amazing in children so young. Uldine has a way of reaching out and taking her audience along with her.

She talked of garments of salvation last night.

"Garments made on Calvary. The thorns piercing His side were the needles going in and out, in and out."

It was afterward that she talked of pretty clothes and make-up.

"Do you care for them?" she was questioned.

The little parson smiled:

"Well, to be very truthful I haven't given the matter very much thought. You see Jesus happens to be my hobby and He keeps me pretty busy."

She hesitated, thoughtful and looked saddened:

"Why do you suppose there weren't more people here? I suppose they think I am sensational and will tell them their faults and that everything they enjoy and take part in is wrong. I wish they knew how much I dislike sensational evangelism and that all have for them is a quiet little message of love and trust in my Heavenly Father."

Little Uldine looked as though she has the weight of all the world on her little shoulders. In that moment no one in the world could have doubted her sincerity.

LEWIS CHARGE DENIED BY TAPLIN

Denial by Frank E. Taplin, Cleveland coal and railroad magnate, that he attempted to use the United Mine Workers of America as a club to secure control of the Pittsburgh Coal Company was contained in affidavits filed by the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation in Federal Court today, in its suit for $1,000,000 damages against the Mine Workers' organization, John L. Lewis, president, and other officers.

The corporation is seeking by injunction to restrain the miners and their officers from interfering with the operation of the mines. President Lewis, in filing an answer to the suit last Saturday, charged that Taplin proposed to enter into an agreement with the miners' union whereby the miners were to assist him in acquiring control of the Pittsburgh Coal Company.

by the Terminal corporation, Taplin says:

"Mr. Lewis has been unsuccessful and knows that the union is bound to lose the mines in Western Pennsylvania, and he is naturally extremely bitter towards the affiant, whom he blames for the predicament in which he is today."

In his affidavit Taplin denies that he or his associates at any time previous to the Miami conference, last February, had bought a single share of stock in the Pittsburgh Coal Company, and attaches to his affidavit a record of the New York Stock Exchange showing that during the two months before the date mentioned by Lewis the total sales of stock of that company were only 4,500 shares, or about one-half of 1 per cent of the capital stock of that company.

PREPARED FOR WINTER; FORGOT TO PAY—30 DAYS

Joe McClain, Negro, 45 Logan street, knew what he was going to do when winter comes. He is said to have purloined two top coats from the Specialty Clothing Company, 915 Fifth avenue. This morning he was sent to the workhouse for 30 days by Magistrate George H. England in Central Station.

VANISHES, WRITES LETTER

MARGUERITE TESTAS

Miss Marguerite Testas, 18, Bulger, Pa., disappeared the day after she took a position as school teacher at Slovan, Pa. She vanished en route to school on the second morning, later a letter arriving at her home bearing her signature and saying that she probably would never be seen again.

Girl Teacher Vanishes; Note Is Only Clue

A few lines written to her parents that they may never see her again was the last heard of pretty Marguerite Testas, 18, of Bulger, who disappeared en route to teach her second day of school at Slovan, near Burgettstown. The last seen of her was on Tuesday, August 30, when she alighted from a train at Burgettstown.

Miss Testas, who attended California State Normal School the past summer, started her teaching career Monday, August 29. She returned home that night, and the next morning started to Slovan. Her mother, Mrs. Louis Testas, did not see her daughter leave home with any clothing, but friends reported seeing the missing teacher aboard the train carrying a suitcase. She was seen to alight at Burgettstown. The parents have not revealed other contents of the letter.

McGovern Scans Park Fund Purchase

Salary payments in the name of a dead man and the county park purchasing deal furnished the high lights today at the resumption of County Controller C. C. McGovern's inquisition into county finances in connection with his private audit of county books.

That the County Commissioners claimed $4,700,000 more bonding power in 1927 than in 1926, when they could not possibly have accumulated more than $800,000, was contended by Controller McGovern while questioning Ralph S. Euler, vice president of the Union Trust Company.

Mr. Euler was being interrogated about the park purchasing deal, financed temporarily through a private arrangement between Commissioner E. V. Babcock and the trust company, when Controller McGovern exhibited one debt statement issued by the commissioner to the trust company and another submitted to the Controller, which carried a difference of $4,700,000 in the commissioners' bonding power.

That someone in the county department of public buildings wrote a letter to a newspaper signed by Elmer Robinson, Negro laborer, who "subbed" for a dead county employe carried on the county payroll, was revealed in the questioning of Robinson. The letter explained that after William Parrish, a laborer died, Robinson, his father-in-law, did his work for several months, but the pay went to the dead man's family. Robinson's answers to Controller McGovern's questions were vague and evasive and he was dismissed as a witness after many meaningless answers.

HAMERSCHLAG'S ESTATE GOES TO WIDOW

Arthur A. Hamerschlag, former president of Carnegie Institute of Technology and later director of the National Research Corporation of New York, in his will, probated today, bequeathed his estate to his widow, Elizabeth Ann Hamerschlag. At her death the estate is to go to their son, Frank N. T. Hamerschlag.

"Reposing especial confidence in my wife to make certain distributions agreed upon between us and having confidence in her ability and disposition to care for, manage and control my estate," Mr. Hamerschlag wrote, "including portions for charities and for the best interest of herself and my son, I empower her to sell, dispose or encumber any of the property bequeathed to her."

Frank F. Nicola and the widow are named executors.

Shoots Ashes From Cigaret, Bullet Kills Him

LITTLETON, Col., Sept. 7.—(U.P.)—Surrounded by a group of friends, Harry O'Brien called to them "Watch me flick the ashes off this cigaret."

O'Brien pulled the trigger of his revolver but, instead of hitting the cigaret, the bullet entered his neck, and he died.

OLD INJURY CAUSES HOMESTEAD MAN'S DEATH

An injury suffered five years ago when he fell from a ladder in the Stall theater, Homestead, proved fatal today to Howard West, 32, of 420 Shaw avenue, McKeesport, who died in the McKeesport Hospital.

2 BOYS HELD FOR GIRL'S LEAP FROM AUTO

Argument In Car Causes Jump

A boy friend's threat to "join the Navy" sent Mercedes Costello, 19, of 22 Whitfield street, on a head-first dive from a moving automobile in Forbes street, near Beeler street, early today. She is in the Homeopathic Hospital, said to be seriously hurt.

Jack Bylerly, 24, of 521 Osceola street, the boy friend, and Edward Murer, 18, of 504 South Mathilda street, were held pending the outcome of the girl's injuries after they had told their story in Morals Court.

There had been a "double date" last night and Murer's girl companion had been taken home. Bylerly was driving the machine toward the home of the Costello girl, with Murer alone in the rear seat, when an argument started.

Bylerly threatened to enlist as a sailor and the girl is said to have opened the door and jumped. Bylerly grasped her and partly checked her fall. The youths were arrested after taking her to the hospital.

DRY AGENTS RUSHING STILL SHOOT OHIO MAN

MARTINS FERRY, O., Sept. 7.—Stanley Vanesky, was probably fatally shot yesterday when Prohibition Officers J. E. Watt, John Coulter and C. E. Cergent rushed a barn near Sewellsville in which a still was being operated.

HIT BY AUTO, GIRL DYING

While her mother watched that she heed a "be careful" warning, Miss Grace Campbell, 20, of 1242 California avenue, was knocked down and probably fatally hurt by an automobile, said to have passed on the left side of a street car in front of her home this morning. The young woman was taken to the Presbyterian Hospital, her right foot crushed and her scalp lacerated. J. H. Brown, 32, of 1901 Davis avenue, the driver, was arrested.

Five years ago Miss Campbell's brother, Wilbert Campbell, now 12, was struck by a machine at the same spot and lost his speech. A month ago Albert Cook, 15, of Stranmore street, was killed here by an automobile.

STORM DELAYS LEVINE HOP

CRANWELL, England, Sept. 7.—(AP.)—Charles A. Levine again postponed his transatlantic hop today, weather reports showing that a 35-mile gale was blowing over the North Atlantic.

Levine and his pilot, Capt. Walter Hinchcliffe, arrived early this morning at the Cranwell airdrome, where their monoplane the Columbia is in readiness. They were reluctant to postpone their attempt again, but bowed to the advice of the meteorological experts.

Some of the weather men with whom Levine was in touch said three or four weeks might elapse before good flying conditions over the Atlantic could be expected.

don't fool yourself

It makes you unpopular

No matter how charming you may be, or how fond of you your friends are, you can't expect them to put up with Halitosis (unpleasant breath) forever. Don't fool yourself that you are always free from halitosis. Few people escape it.

⅓ Had Halitosis
200 dentists declare that about every third patient is frequently halitoxic—and further declare they have been forced to use Listerine in self-defense.
Face to face evidence

Since you yourself cannot tell whether you offend this way, the wisest thing to do is to use Listerine, the safe antiseptic, before any engagement with nice people.

Immediately it destroys unpleasant odors arising from teeth and gums—the most common source of Halitosis.

Better keep a bottle handy in home and office, so that you may always be sure. Send for our free book of etiquette. Address Lambert Pharmacal Co., Dept. G-2, 2101 Locust St., St. Louis, Mo.

INQUEST IN BOY SLAYING DUE TOMORROW

A coroner's inquest into the murder and robbery of the unidentified victim of alleged boy murderers in West Homestead will be held tomorrow morning. The man was beaten with a club and a rock and left to die on the Monongahela River bank after being robbed, last Friday.

Alvin Hess, 16, and Robert Stevens, 14, of Hazel way, West Homestead, who, the police say, have admitted the killing and robbery, were turned over to the coroner after being arraigned in Morals Court on charges of murder and robbery. Hess was committed to county jail, and Stevens is in the custody of the juvenile court.

SAY DRIVER DIED SLEEPING

WASHINGTON, Pa., Sept. 7.—A coroner's jury investigating the death of Clarence A. Eichenlaub, of Pittsburgh, killed last Wednesday when his auto plunged over a bridge railing, on the National road, to railroad tracks 100 feet below, came to the conclusion he was asleep at the wheel. It would have been almost impossible, the jury believed, for such an accident to occur otherwise, unless the car was completely out of control. A verdict of accidental death was rendered.

FISHER KEEPS SCHEDULE ON INSPECTION

YORK, Pa., Sept. 7.—(INS.)—Adhering strictly to his schedule of visits, Gov. John S. Fisher today continued his first inspection tour of state owned and state aided institutions, with visits to Columbia and Lancaster planned before noon.

The Governor spent the night here, expressing himself as highly pleased with conditions of the six institutions he inspected during the first day of his trip.

Today the Governor was to have lunch at Lancaster after inspecting the Lancaster Hospital and then was to be taken through Stevens School, Rosemore Sanatorium and the Children's Home here. Late this afternoon he was to leave for Coatesville, where, after a brief inspection of the hospital, he was to motor to Norristown to spend the night.

During his stopover here the Governor announced the appointment of former State Senator D. Edward Long, of Fayetteville, Franklin county, as a member of the board of trustees of Eastern Penitentiary.

FIGHTS SON'S EXTRADITION

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 7.—A finish fight directed by Dr. H. C. Hill to save his son from conviction on a charge of matricide in Streator, Ill., was indicated today as preparations were made to return Harry Hill to his home state.

Attorneys employed by the physician to defend his son indicated they will not allow their client to be extradited without a fight. Hearing on the fugitive warrant under which Hill was held was scheduled for Thursday before Gov. Roland H. Hartley.

The youth, who was arrested Saturday, is charged with shooting his eccentric mother to death and burning her body in the basement of their home. He had admitted his identity, denied the charge and police believed Illinois officers would have no difficulty in returning him to that state.

Seattle detectives also were convinced that the suspect's incorrect answers to questions concerning his family and history were either the result of honest ignorance or an intention to be confusing.

Schools Are Calling

More than 100,000 children of the Pittsburgh district will return to school this week.

It is fine to know there will be not only "a seat for every pupil," but also a teaching staff of the highest character.

Our schools are going forward, splendidly.

One of the most important lessons to be learned, however, in school or out, and not excepting the three R's, is the lesson of thrift and saving. In this Pittsburgh is also going forward.

Write or call for a copy of our new Booklet, "Little Stories of Gold That Glittered."

The Dress Shopping List of the College Girl

The dress shopping list of the college girl (or of any young woman of college age), if supplemented by her comments, might read as follows, if inspired by the showing of new frocks in The Misses' Shop:

Class Room Dresses

"Saw the best looking ones at Horne's, dresses of the very light cloths I have been reading about, some of them as sheer as georgette. Awfully attractive ones are in dark blue all mixed with a sort of silver gray in tiny checks and stripes which give them a hazy look. Then there are dresses in greens, reds, brown and beige tones. Those I liked were priced $19.75 to $39.50.

"And jersey! I always did like jersey dresses, and I like them more than ever this fall—such darling ones, appliqued with contrasting color, or heavily stitched, or hand-embroidered. Some were only $16.75; others were priced as much as $29.50."

Afternoon Dresses

"I must have two afternoon dresses. I know one is going to be a satin, for many of the new ones at Horne's are so simple that Mother can't say they are too 'old' for me. As to the other dress I am undecided between one of velvet, and a dress of crepe trimmed with velvet. I can get either kind at Horne's at $25.00, $35.00, $39.50, $49.50 or up to $75.00 if I want to go that high."

Evening Dresses

"Oh, such gorgeous evening dresses! Transparent velvet ones, which are almost as sheer as if they were of chiffon—many of them in black, sometimes with great motifs of pastel blue or pink. One of the loveliest ones of all was of la France blue transparent velvet, with godet flounces of tulle in the same color. There are dresses of taffeta, too, and of taffeta with tulle. There are straight line and bouffant dresses. They are priced all the way from $25.00 to $150.00."

Coats With Long-haired Furs Are Expressive of Youth

The motion and spiritedness of youth are expressed by the fluffy, long-haired furs which are used to trim many of the finest new coats shown by The Misses' Shop in a delightful collection.

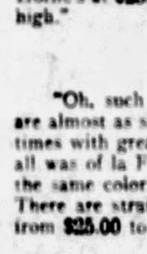
Badger, pointed fox, natural and dyed foxes, wolf, pointed and black skunk, natural and dyed lynx, are used as graceful shawl collars, Queen Anne collars, and the new, long revers collars, and as deep cuffs, and as borders on flaring panels.

Prices on these beautiful coats are $100.00 to $345.00.

—Horne's, Second Floor—

It's the DOBBS

WILDAIR



THE spirit of the out-of-doors, the chic that is characteristic of all Dobbs Hats, and a light weight Felt as soft as silk—these are a few of the charms in the new Dobbs Hat! The season's smartest shades . . . and all head sizes.

—Horne's, Fourth Floor—

An Afternoon Glove of Particular Chic

Of imported washable kid, in the pull-on style which is so good for the in-between occasion when a one-button glove is too casual and the longer Mousquetaire is too formal. Daintily scalloped at the top of the cuff. In beige, gray, mode, black and white. $4.50 pair.

—Horne's, Main Floor—

Smart Handbags, $4.95

Pouches—with back strap or matching handle, or with an ornamental clasp—envelope bags with smart ornaments or embroidered in the manner of the best imports.

And in the season's smartest colors—black and brown!

Black ones—of lustrous moire and slipper satin with an ornament of marcasite for the rather formal afternoon occasion—of suede with silver trimming for the smart young thing who frequents the bridge table—of velvet to match the new dresses of this versatile and popular fabric.

Brown ones of velvet as luxurious as fur are as Fall-like as the turning leaves.

ACQUIT DOCTOR IN DEATH

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 7. (AP)—Dr. R. M. Lytle of Saltsburg, a physician, was acquitted of a charge of involuntary manslaughter by order of Judge W. T. Dom yesterday after the principal commonwealth witness failed to appear at the trial.

The prosecution against the physician was made by state police, who investigated the death of John McComb on a highway near Saltsburg. McComb, it was said, owed Dr. Lytle a bill and when they met they became involved in an argument, during which the doctor was alleged to have pushed McComb, causing him to fall to the road, where he struck his head, suffering fatal injuries.

She'll Stop Levine's Aerial Joy Rides, Says Wife

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Mrs. Charles A. Levine declared on her arrival yesterday on the Ile de France that she is "sick and tired" of her husband's aerial antics.

"When he comes back home I am going to put my foot down and be the boss," Mrs. Levine is quoted as saying.

Mrs. Levine's husband's flight to Germany as a passenger in his plane with Clarence D. Chamberlin was a surprise to her, but his hop alone from Le Bourget Field to London last week was a greater one, she says.

She was not the only one surprised.

CLARKSBURG GETS JUDGE

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Sept. 7.—(AP)—After a three-months' deadlock over the selection of a city police judge, during most of which time the city had no such official and a part of which it had two, H. M. G. Ross, young local attorney, today took up the duties of the position, having been chosen late last night by city council. He is a son of Councilman James M. Ross.

The action was taken at the council's first meeting with Dr. R. L. Osborn, new city manager, who was chosen to succeed G. L. Coyle, ousted as a result of the police judge deadlock.

Titian-Haired Mate Tells of Carol's Life

Prince Carol of Rumania, errant son of the distinguished Queen Marie, lives in a little villa near Neuilly, France. With him is the demure looking, red-haired Helene Lupescu, who stands between him and the throne of their native land, to the southeast.

The tongues of the civilized world, especially those trained in Europe, are lashing the strange, tall, roaming Prince. And they are whipping the bewitching young woman.

But still the pair live on, presumably careless of tradition and custom and convention.

DELVES INTO FUTURE.

That's the summary of the condition which Madame Lupescu reviews in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. In three articles to be printed on successive Sundays in this paper, she tells of the past, the present—she even dares to predict the future relations of the royal Carol and herself.

How Carol made the beds; dusted, washed the dishes, helped her do the household work when they couldn't get maid service—this she tells frankly. The rumors that have been passed from lip to lip, around the bridge and baccarat diplomatic court and wine tables of Europe, concerning Queen Marie, she answers. The "honeymoon" she and Carol spent in Venice and Biarritz; their companions and guests; how their villa is furnished—these and other colorful bits of the strange, almost unreal lives of these two people are graphically pictured in the coming articles.

INTRIGUES OF COURT.

You will understand more of the intrigue of court life in Europe today, and the individual temperaments of two people on the tongues of the world, when you read these articles.

The first will be in next Sunday's Sun-Telegraph.

NEW GIANT IN MOTOR FIELD

By RAY PRIEST.

Universal Service Automobile Editor.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 7.—The center of the automobile industry has learned that the ground work of a second general motors organization had been started by E. L. Cord, youthful president of the Auburn Motor Car Company, of Auburn, Ind.

With what was said to be the financial backing of one of Chicago's wealthiest families, Cord has purchased outright the Lycoming Manufacturing Company of Williamsport, Pa., the Spencer Heater Company of Kalamazoo, Mich., and announced "still greater revolutionary developments at Duesenburg, Inc.," purchased about one year ago.

The companies acquired by the young manufacturer represent over $11,000,000 in assets. They have been doing in excess of $40,000,000 sales volume annually.

Total employment by Cord now exceeds 10,000 persons.

Lycoming is the second largest builder of motors exclusively in the world.

FERRY ST. SPAN DRIVE OPENS

A campaign for the proposed bridge over the Monongahela River at Ferry street to connect with tunnels through the hills to the southwestern end of the county, was to be launched at a meeting late this afternoon in the auditorium of the Chamber of Commerce.

Representatives from Crafton, Crafton Heights, Ingram, Greentree, Carnegie, Thornburg, McKees Rocks and other communities were scheduled to attend. Speakers include A. H. Burchfield, Walter Rosenbaum, John B. Reynolds, Walter F. Fraser, L. Fred Kloos and other business men from the Golden Triangle and the outlying districts affected.

The Carnegie Rotary Club, at a meeting yesterday, adopted resolutions in favor of the plan.

Red itching blisters on baby's face healed by Resinol

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 19.—"My baby had eczema for three months and nothing seemed to do him any good until I tried your products. His cheeks were red and covered with blisters, and the itching was so annoying that he could not sleep. After reading your ad in the paper I purchased a jar of Resinol Ointment and a cake of Resinol Soap. Only a few applications stopped the itching entirely and within a week the redness was gone and his skin practically clear. Your ointment is FINE! I wonderful and I will praise it to everyone." New Hearst Plant In N. Y. World's Greatest

NEW YORK, Sept 7.—The greatest newspaper plant in the world devoted exclusively to the production of newspapers is the new Hearst publications building on South street.

The new structure within a very short time will house three of William Randolph Hearst's New York newspapers, the Evening Journal, the daily New York American and the Sunday New York American.

Each of the papers will be separate entities housed under one roof.

Designed solely to secure maximum efficiency and celerity in the making and distribution of newspapers, the new plant is without equal in location and plant layout design, with unparalleled productive compactness and distributive facilities.

The Hearst publications building is built on the block bounded by Water street on the north, between Catherine and Market slips on the east and west, and faces on South street at the waterfront.

The building was designed by Charles H. Birge, one of the nation's best-known architects, in collaboration with George E. Panconast, chief managing engineer, for the past 18 years associated with the Hearst newspaper property activities, who studied the plant layout and equipment.

The site upon which the building is located was originally a part of the East River, and to secure a satisfactory and safe foundation for the massive structure, an engineering feat of no mean size, 3,500 piles, averaging 50 feet in length, were driven for support of the footing.

Few persons realize that a newspaper plant must have a foundation far stronger than is needed in any other type of building. When the massive newspaper presses are running at top speed they generate a vibration which would soon crack the foundation and fabrication of an ordinary structure.

During the operations to secure a practical foundation great trouble was encountered in sinking these 3,500 piles, for it was found that under the site lay the buried bones of old-time ships, former bulkhead cribbing and other miscellaneous obstacles which had not seen the light of day for many generations.

As the recent excavations in the tombs of the Valley of the Kings revealed the former glory that was once Egypt's, so the relics brought to light during these operations revealed the various phases of maritime glory that has ever been the pride of the port of Nieuw Amsterdam and present New York.

The new building occupies a ground area of 45,450 square feet and is six stories in height.

It is constructed around a roll paper storehouse which has a storage capacity of 7,000 rolls, and this alone occupies an additional 14,100 square feet.

The building is one of the finest products of the nation's outstanding construction firms, the Turner Construction Company, which has erected some of the most noted concrete structures in the United States.

The entire fabrication is of reinforced concrete beam and girder construction with the dimensions of the column bays 20x25 feet.

Your Smile and Your Teeth

Quick Dental "Make-up" for Dullish Teeth

DID you know "off-color" teeth now are restored to clear whiteness? One's whole appearance thus may be quickly changed.

Famous movie stars use this way before going on a scene. That's why movie smiles glisten so. Leading dentists urge it widely. For it protects the teeth and firms tender gums.

It works by removing a dingy film that forms on your teeth, and dulls them by absorbing discolorations from food, smoking, etc. A slippery film you can feel with your tongue; and that invites germ growth, decayed teeth and gum troubles.

Old-type dentifrices failed to remove it successfully. That's why brushing has thus far failed you.

Remove it and you will be amazed at what you see. Discard old ways now. Get Pepsodent at any drug store. Or send for 10-day tube.

Growing children sometimes require a tonic as do their elders

"Dear, I want you to know how that S.S.S. has been used for over 100 years—it is made from fresh roots and herbs—growing children sometimes need a tonic, as do their elders—it is helping you, and I want you to take it regularly before each meal."

Try S.S.S. and you will be surprised how quickly your appetite improves. If you are tired, run-down and listless you owe it to yourself and family to give S.S.S. a trial. It helps Nature build up red blood corpuscles. It improves the processes by which the body is nourished. S.S.S. is time-tried and reliable, and is unequaled for restoring strength and vitality.

S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

Love's Fatal Lure

LOVE never flowered into a more beautiful romance than that which culminated in the marriage of Beatrice and Joe. Each to the other was life's dearest possession. It seemed that ahead of them lay only happiness.

The fact that Joe's salary was small—that he was still studying for a bigger job—seemed not to matter—at first. But as time passed, with the financial goal still far ahead, Beatrice's mind often clouded with worry and doubt. Her girl friends, more fortunately married, had pretty clothes, smart cars, lovely homes, which they were forever flaunting before her envious eyes.

For a long time Beatrice nursed her growing discontent in stony silence, while Joe strove desperately, by longer hours and harder work, to give her the things her heart so ardently craved. But the seed of revolt had started its deadly growth, and Beatrice secretly determined to "taste the joys of life," regardless of consequences to Joe or herself.

Little did she dream of the terrible lengths to which her desperate folly was to lead her or she would have shuddered with horror at the step she proposed to take.

As it was, she went desperately, blindly ahead, soon to be caught in a seething maelstrom of disaster, anguish and terror that was to forever destroy her hopes of future happiness.

You cannot afford to miss the story of this wife's tragic, soul-stirring experience. It is entitled "Under Cover of Matrimony," and appears complete in True Story for October.

"One mighty lunge, and the door went crashing inward. Beter was struggling in Paul's arms. Myrtle leaped toward him, revolver raised. In the scuffle which followed, a shot rang out." (From "Under Cover of Matrimony," October True Story Magazine.)

Stories All the More Amazing Because They Are True

"The most interesting thing about life," said a great psychologist, "is its astonishing unexpectedness. Something happens—bringing with it a shock of surprise, wonder, awe, fear—and we are left to speculate on the causes and conditions that brought that particular thing about."

The above observation is especially true when it applies to the dramatic happenings in the lives of human beings. We learn with a shock of amazement that some startling event has transpired in the life of a friend, or a well-known public personality, or someone who is a total stranger to us. And we wonder at the hidden motives, the untold hate, love, sacrifice, temptation, human error or folly that brought it about.

In True Story Magazine every month the mysterious forces at work in the lives of men and women, that make them do the things they do, are fully and frankly revealed. If you want to peer deep into the souls of those who have really lived—if you want to learn the truth about life—its struggles, defeats, triumphs and tragedies, buy True Story every month. Your newsdealer has the October issue, which contains seventeen gripping features. Get your copy today.

(Above)—"YOU'VE DISGRACED US ALL," she said. With her future assured by her coming marriage to a man old enough to be her father, Jacqueline's parents thought she ought to be happy. But she had given her heart to another—and with one act she started a seething drama that none of them will ever forget. (See "The Sun I Must Forget," True Story for October.)

(Below)—"HE DREW ME CLOSE."—A vacation with friends in the north woods—away from husband and home—how harmless it seemed to Sally, until the handsome, debonnaire Buddy came into her life. Should not tell him she was married until too late to turn back. Don't miss Sally's startling confession, "Moon Magic," in October True Story Magazine.

$24,000.00 for TRUE STORIES

Each year True Story Magazine pays many thousands of dollars to its readers for stories taken from their lives. In your life, probably, there is a story for which we are willing to pay handsomely. This is the time to cash in upon it for right now True Story is offering $24,000, in prizes, ranging from $200 each up to $1,000 each for true stories of the sort you have to tell. You will find the full particulars in the October issue.

(Above)—"YOU ARE UNDER ARREST!"—The thrilling appearance of a beautiful Russian girl, queen in bondage to a policeman, and her sensational escape by a clever ruse, only to plunge headlong into the agony of a far worse fate. Her story, "My Phantom Babe," appears complete in October True Story Magazine.

(Right)—"I STOOD AS THOUGH CARVED IN STONE"—The glamour of the stage has accounted for many life tragedies, but strangely enough it was "the world outside" that brought this little actress to grief, and raises the question: Do wealth and family pride mean more than honor? "He Was Ashamed of Me," in October True Story, contains an unforgettable lesson for all girls.

COOLIDGE DONE WITH ARMS PARLEYS

By JOHN T. LAMBERT.
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

RAPID CITY, S. D., Sept. 7.—President Coolidge will allow his administration to expire on March 4, 1929, without making another effort to engage the major sea-powers of the world in a new conference for limitation of naval armaments, it was indicated here.

This renewed indication of the President's policy was based upon the first comment from the Summer White House since Lord Cecil resigned from the British cabinet as a protest against Great Britain's refusal to accept any measure of disarmament at the dismal Geneva parley.

It has been felt in some sources that Cecil's retirement under the circumstances would betoken a new desire by England to effect a reduction of her great cruiser program. President Coolidge holds a contrary view. He believes that Cecil's exit leaves the present British government more unanimous in its disagreement upon America's aims for limitation than if Cecil had remained in.

Previously, President Coolidge had authorized denial of the reports that he intended to call the sea-powers to a new conference on the eve of his retirement.

President Coolidge does not want to foreclose himself entirely against another naval conference, but at present he sees no disposition among some of the foreign nations to curtail their vast building programs.

LAY CALAMITIES TO SUNSPOTS

By LAURA PATRICK.
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

BERLIN, Sept. 7.—Natural catastrophes, which German scientists connect with the recently renewed sunspot activity, took a further toll of 18 dead and 100 houses wrecked when a new cyclone swept an area of East Galicia already devastated by floods.

The total of dead is estimated at nearly 200 with thousands homeless, according to the latest Warsaw dispatches.

The storm area is on the increase with the river Dnieper outside its banks in the entire Bukowina section of Rumania where with 50,000 people now without shelter, there is a steadily growing casualty list.

Near Marincia an auto bus overturned killing 16 passengers.

Archduke, Film Extra, Abandons Duel

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 7.—(AP.)—The Examiner says today that Archduke Leopold of Austria, now playing "bits" in the films here, has withdrawn his challenge to Count Laszlo Szechenyi, Hungarian minister to the United States, to a duel.

The archduke took this action, he said, because Count Szechenyi, now touring Europe, had refused to pay any attention to the challenge. The archduke said he had taken the matter up with the Hungarian government in an attempt to have the count removed from office because of what he said was the latter's disinclination to fight.

The challenge was buried by the archduke after an exchange of felicitations with the diplomat, which Leopold interpreted as the equivalent to facing gloves in the face of each other. The archduke's ire was fired when, after he had asked the Hungarian representative to handle loans which Leopold proposed to raise, the request was rejected as "tactless." This, the archduke replied by telegram, was an adjective which no one could apply with impunity to a member of his royal family.

Neighbors Said — — Because She Complained So Much.

ONE DAY it was headaches, next day her stomach troubled, and last night she could not sleep. Sure she was constipated, nervous and almost a physical wreck—and she used to be so good-looking. Always something bothered her. My what a miserable life! The fact was, she had many symptoms of System Poisoning—that insidious malady doctors call "TOXEMIA"—and didn't know it.

And there are thousands like her, who don't know what to do. Many folks when they feel a little off, with nerves on edge, or lacking in pep, take ordinary laxative pills and waters that fail to eliminate the poison wastes that develop dangerous bacteria in the intestines. That's why so many suffer—on the verge of System Poisoning (TOXEMIA). But just let such people begin taking that double action preparation Partola—the internal antiseptic AND laxative—and see those symptoms and that constipated feeling absolutely disappear, often in one night! Partola is so pleasant to take, it is often called "The Doctor in Candy Form." All good druggists sell a regular box of Partola at 30c, double size 60c.

ARREST SUSPECT IN FLYNN SLAYING

SECOND MAN IS DETAINED AS WITNESS

Arrested with another man and two girls in Schenley Park early today, when a loaded revolver was found on the front seat of his automobile, John Means, 31, of Oliphant Furnace, near Uniontown, was held today, city detectives say, for questioning in connection with the killing of Edward Flynn, 63, at Graham street and Center avenue, early Sunday.

Means and Joseph Wesley, 39, of 828 Penn avenue, were held after a hearing in Morals Court, and Jennie Jakielo, 16, of 129 South Fifteenth street, and Ethel Edwards, 16, of 73½ South Thirteenth street, were discharged. Detectives say that the automobile answers the description of one driven away from the scene of the Flynn murder. Wesley, detectives say, is being held as a possible witness.

RULING ON WILL QUESTIONED

Argument on the exceptions filed to the decision of the court in concluding that William H. Smith, named as a beneficiary in the will of his wife Emma King Smith, had a right to take his statutory share of the estate, and in which an oral agreement also figures, was heard before a full bench in Orphans Court today.

About $200,000 is involved, the estate having been left by Mrs. Smith to her husband, two nephews, Walter W. Irwin and D. King Irwin and a niece Mrs. Ralph Baggaley. Smith was to get one-half the income as long as he lived and at his death, the income was to go to the two nephews and the niece.

It appears that Smith elected to take his statutory share of the estate or one-half; the court having ruled he had a right so to do. Before there was a division of the estate Smith died and Smith's sons, by a former marriage, Acheson and Mark Smith, are seeking the father's share as the rightful heirs to the amount.

Attorney Leonard S. Levin, who represents Mrs. Baggaley, says there was an oral agreement, in which it was understood that Smith was only to participate in the estate during his lifetime, the estate then to go to the other beneficiaries under the will. An effort is therefore being made to have the court carry out this oral agreement and prevent Smith's sons, who are not of blood relationship to the other beneficiaries named by Mrs. Smith, from participating in the benefits of the estate.

CAR LOADINGS REACH PEAK OF PRESENT YEAR

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Loading of revenue freight totaled 1,108,725 cars for the week ended August 27, a new high peak for this year, the American Railway Association announces. This was a drop of 19,338 cars from the corresponding week of last year, however, and a decrease of 15,213 cars from the same week in 1925.

Suit Salesman's Idea Was a 'Knockout' —On Paper

John Wasserman, 40, of 2816 Kenilworth street, Brookline, evidently thought himself a premier salesman. Police have their doubts.

Two suits for the price of one, $29.50, lured many office and mill workers. Then complaints began to pile up at police headquarters.

Yesterday Wasserman carried his selling scheme into one of the biggest department stores in the city. Clerks in the suit department were suspicious and summoned Detectives Edward McEntee and Clarence Raeder, who arrested Wasserman. Customers complained they received only one suit instead of two.

"Ask My Bank"

When a young man earns the right to talk this way about himself, his battle of success is half won.

Bankers are conservative, and it is wise for young men to establish banking relations, because rightly or wrongly the banker's opinion carries weight in the business world.

For years it has been our constant endeavor to co-operate with young men, because we realize that the aggressive youngster of today is the leader of tomorrow.

Get the habit of dropping in, if it's only for a chat.

CHAPLINS BOTH GET BACK TO WORK

By Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 7.—Charles Chaplin, film comedian, and Lita Grey Chaplin, who recently divorced him, are back to their working careers.

Mrs. Chaplin is on her way to New York to confer with stage and vaudeville producers concerning offers made her since the divorce.

Chaplin, it was reported at his studio, donned makeup for the first time since he left for New Yok last January, after Mrs. Chaplin's divorce action was filed.

Mrs. Chaplin, in New York, will confer with Harry Weber and another producer, whose name she withheld. The latter, it was said, has offered her $7,500 a week for an eight weeks tour. The Chaplin children remain with their great grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William Curry of Beverly Hills.

Chaplin is now free to occupy his Beverly Hills mansion, which, up to the time of her departure, had been occupied by Mrs. Chaplin.

Mrs. Chaplin said that upon her return she will build a home at Beverly Hills next to that of her grandfather.

HALIBUT, 400 YEARS OLD, BROUGHT INTO BOSTON

Brisbane Home, Tells Of Clemenceau Visit

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Arthur Brisbane, editor of the New York Journal, returned from Europe yesterday on the French liner Ile De France. He was accompanied by Mrs. Brisbane and their son, Seward. A daughter, Sarah, who accompanied them abroad, is remaining in France to attend school.

In an interview with the newspapermen, Mr. Brisbane, on his arrival, said:

"In London I saw Lord Beaverbrook, of the London Express. London was not unfamiliar to me as I had been there in my younger days, as correspondent for the New York Sun. Paris brought back many recollections. I was at school there in 1875."

He said he had fulfilled one great wish while in France. He motored down to Jardin Vendee, where Clemenceau, in his retirement, works in his garden and lives in great simplicity in a cottage overlooking the sea. The editor added:

"I did not think he would see me, but when I sent word to him that I read his debates with Jaures when a student in Paris, he consented to see me.

"Clemenceau is vigorous for a man of his age, 87. He said to me of mankind: 'I do not detest men, but I do not like them, either.'

"Clemenceau said everyone knows that everybody won the Marne, except Joffre, meaning that Joffre had won the battle."

With his characteristic quick words he described the interior and exterior of the little cottage, the old woman, who is a devout Catholic, but who does not let that interfere with her attention to her distinguished charge because he is anti-religious. He spoke of the simple food, the frugal existence of the two.

He believes that the World War produced three men who saved the Allies, Clemenceau, Lloyd George and Foch.

Asked what his impressions of England had been, Mr. Brisbane quoted Voltaire, but not as expressing his own opinion: "The British are like their beer—froth at the top, dregs at the bottom, the middle excellent."

He added:

"They are getting along. All human beings are alike. If they owe you, they hate you; and if they pay part of what they owe, they think they have done an amazing thing."

EDGEWOOD WOMAN'S CLUB TO OPEN SEASON OCT. 5

Quite in line with the study topic, "A Review of Recent Developments in Art, Science, Literature and Politics," selected by the Edgewood Woman's Club, will be the president's address on "The Wonderful Decade," Mrs. R. C. McElfish, the executive head, will make her address on the opening day, October 5, when there will be music by Charles Riley, violinist, and tea will be served. The second October program will consist of a talk by Mrs. L. C. Gardner on "Glimpses of Japan" and a review of "A Daughter of the Samurai," by Mrs. John F. Miller. The international art exhibit will be visited November 2 and on November 9 Mrs. W. C. Hawley will review political current events and Mrs. C. B. Rice will speak on "Adventuring in Porto Rico." "He conquers who endures" is the significant motto adorning the inside title page in the new year book of the Progressive Blind Women's Club. The books name the club's opening date as September 10, the speaker as Miss Esther Bonnell and her subject as "The Girl of Today." William McNally will sing, and Miss Annabel Carter will furnish piano solos. At the October session the members will enjoy an afternoon in foreign countries through the eyes and words of Miss Mary Clare, Mrs. Charles B. McFall, Miss Martha McCombs and Miss Myrtilla Kelly, all of whom have spent the summer abroad. Music, consisting of folk songs of the various nations, will be provided. President's day is set for November 12 in the Congress clubhouse, where the majority of meetings are held. Mrs. John M. Phillips will address the club on "The Home" at the December gathering. Two events will take place in January, the first on the 11th, when the club's social committee will have charge of a New Year's party for the kindergarten children of the Western Pennsylvania School for the Blind at the school, and the January meeting, at which there will be a musical program. Lester Edwin Harris will address the members on "The Game of Life" at the February meeting, and the following month Arthur Sterry Coggeshall, of Carnegie Museum, will speak on "Indians," the members gathering for this in the lobby of Carnegie Institute at 2 o'clock. A program in charge of the dramatic committee, the annual meeting and the June outing will round out a busy year.

The Wednesday Current Events Class has wandered far afield since the days when it had nothing but current events talks with the exception, perhaps, of its mid-year and closing social affairs. This season the program will present an interesting variety of speakers and events. The president's day reception is to be held at the home of Mrs. Marie Tvito Phillips, Darlington road, and a political meeting with Mrs. J. O. Miller as the speaker is next on the calendar. A visit will be made to the international art exhibit November 16 and "travel snap shots" are to be given by three members at a late November session. A luncheon with a seasonable program is down for December and in the new year, Mrs. Edith B. Male, whose book reviews are growing to be a popular feature in many organizations, will give a review following luncheon at the Congress Clubhouse. An entirely new departure is assigned for several of the spring programs—a 10-minute word pronunciation preceding the regular feature, Miss Soel's current events lectures. The mid-year tea, February 1, will be marked by a play and at a literary luncheon and afternoon in March, the Rev. Dr. William R. Farmer, will be the speaker. Health day, with Dr. James F. Hammer as speaker, and the annual luncheon will be the concluding events.

The Keystone Association for Historical Research will celebrate its fifteenth anniversary at the president's day luncheon, October 3, in the Congress of Clubs. Under the club's selected study subject, "Pennsylvania Since the World War," such topics as "Current Events," "Treatment of the Ex-Soldier," "Labor Conditions," "Progress in Medicine," "Literature," "Music," "Industry" and "Roads" will be discussed at the monthly sessions. The art exhibit will be visited January 9, a day for the blind will be observed February 6, the Christmas party is set for Christmas Day and the annual luncheon for May 7.

The Tourists' year book, one of the handsomest of the season, is in the mails. Its calendar for the year is: October 3, president's day; October 17, "Our Boundaries;" November 7 and 21, international art exhibit and study of "Our Boundaries;" December 5 and 19, fall musicale and "International Relations;" January, "Porto Rico" and "The Drama;" February, "The Hawaiian Islands" and Washington's Birthday program; March, "The Philippine Islands" and "Education;" April, the spring musicale and a program for the blind; May, "Samoa and Guam" and "The Immigrant;" June 8, the annual outing.

Millie and Sally See Nye To the Train; the Former Is Taught to Drive

What Has Gone Before

SALLY JEROME, pretty and clever, is the prop and mainstay of her family which consists of MRS. JEROME, the twins, BEAU and MILLIE, and Sally herself. Mrs. Jerome enjoys poor health so Sally does the housework mornings and office work for MR. PEEVEY downtown afternoons. In the flat below the Jeromes' flat lives young TED SLOAN, an automobile salesman, who wants her to marry him and keep on working. But the only man in whom she is interested is JOHN NYE, whose real estate office is just across the hall from Mr. Peevey's. Nye hires Millie as his secretary and becomes blindly infatuated with her. Sally is heartsick and unreasonably jealous. Beau manages to get $110 from Ted Sloan by means of two bad checks, and Ted threatens to turn him over to the police. Sally borrows the money to pay Ted from Mr. Peevey. But instead of paying Ted, Beau uses the money to elope with his fiancee, MABEL WILMOT. Beau and Mabel start borrowing from Sally the first week of their married life, although they have not set up housekeeping, but are boarding and both of them are working. Aunt Emily gives a Sunday picnic for them, and all of the family except Sally drive home from it in John Nye's car, when he calls for Millie. She refuses to, and starts home alone much later.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

BUT, without half trying, she could recall any number of times when Millie had scolded her mother for demanding so much waiting upon.

"She may be sick," she had often said crossly to Sally, "but she's not so sick that she couldn't keep my clothes mended up if she wanted to! She can read all day and half the night, and that doesn't seem to injure her health!"

But Millie was singing an altogether different tune now. "We've just spoiled Mother," she was saying to John Nye. "There's not a reason in the world why she shouldn't stay alone in the flat sometimes in the evening—but she hates to, and that's what Sally's thinking of now. Come on, hop in, Sally; we won't be gone very long! And Mother's all right, I just saw her."

Sally hopped in, and the brown car started. . . . After all, Mrs. Jerome never was downright ill unless she had overeaten. And besides, as John Nye had pointed out, Millie ought not to drive home alone at midnight.

The night was sweet and damp and soft. The stars seemed to come right down to the housetops, and a warm wind was blowing.

And Sally, leaning back luxuriously against the deep cushions, forgot her troubles and gave herself up to the soothing motion of the car and the beauty of the breathing night. She closed her eyes and dozed a little as they rolled along.

The sudden stopping of the car awakened her. It was standing in a wide driveway beside a tall, narrow house. There were thorn-apple trees along the drive, and beyond the thick foliage she could see shuttered windows with light shining through the chinks, and a white doorway that was halfway opened, letting a shaft of orange-colored radiance out into the darkness. John Nye's house.

"Pretty spiffy-looking house, isn't it?" asked Millie, softly, when John's tall form had vanished through the doorway. "Certainly looks like money to little Millie."

Sally put her head to one side. "It's a lovely house," she said. "It looks as if nice, solid, decent people lived in it. I like their shutters and thorn-apple trees, don't you?"

"I like their money." Millie's little voice had lost all of its velvety quality and was as hard as sounding brass.

Then John Nye came running out of the house with a big kitbag in his hand they were on their way once more. Millie drove, this time, with her little hands under his on the steering wheel, and her body close against his as she leaned towards him.

Her voice came floating back to Sally every now and then.

"Don't know how I'm going to get along without you, Johnny," she said once, and then, "I do hope you'll find your mother better this time. Isn't it dreadful to know that your mother is ill? It's the most dreadful thing in the world."

Sally couldn't help remembering the afternoon, not so long before, when Millie had rushed out of the flat, leaving Mrs. Jerome groaning and writhing with her attack of indigestion behind her.

"Jiminy! I do hope mother's all right now," she thought anxiously. "I wish I hadn't taken Millie's word for it."

"Let's hurry a bit," she said when John Nye's train had pulled out, and she and Millie were back in the brown car.

Then it came to her that Millie had just learned to drive, and that it would not be safe for her to drive fast. "No, maybe you'd better not hurry," she went on as they started off. "Ted says a new driver ought to go slowly—keep the car under control."

"New driver? What do you mean, new driver?" asked Millie, with a disdainful lift of her chin. "I've known how to drive a car for two years!"

Sally gave her a quick, puzzled look. "Why—But John Nye was just helping you on the way down," she said, and Millie gave a shout of scornful laughter.

"He thinks he taught me to drive," said she. "He had a swell time, showing me how to shift gears and everything. So I let him go ahead and treat me like a dumbbell. He got a great boot out of it!"

Sally frowned. "But what was the idea of not telling him that you knew how to drive?"

This time Millie groaned in mock despair. "Sally, you just never will learn anything about men, will you?" she asked. "Don't you know that they just adore an innocent little simp of a girl who doesn't know enough to drive a car or come in out of the rain? At least, the Johnny Nye type of real he-man does! If I'd told him that Davidson taught me to drive, he'd have wondered how well I knew Davidson, and if he put his arms around me when he showed me how to steer around the corners, and so on."

"Did Davidson teach you to drive?" Sally asked, and Millie nodded vigorously.

"I'll tell the waiting world that he did! He taught me to smoke, too, and he mixed me the first high-ball I ever mixed to my lips," she replied, and her voice grew more and more wistful as she went on talking. "I had a circus with Davidson, always, but he's not the marrying kind. My Johnny's nice, and he has a lot of money and he'll make a perfect husband for me."

Sally tried to answer but failed. There was a lump in her throat that kept her painfully silent.

"I sure do miss Davy Davidson, thought," the light voice beside her ran on. "He knew how to show a girl a good time. . . . Now, you take John Nye. He's much too polite for me! He thinks that no nice girl would step inside of a road house! His own sister never was allowed to go to them before she got married. I don't

Urge Tear Gas Bombs As Jail Break Bar

Stating that everything humanly possible had been done to prevent the jail break of Paul Jaworski and John Vasbinder, convicted murderers, the special committee appointed by the prison board to probe the escape, yesterday exonerated Warden John McNeil, who was on vacation when the convicts shot their way out of jail.

In exonerating McNeil, the committee recommended that additional barriers and the installation of electrically controlled tear gas bombs with a new locking system would greatly reduce the chances for escapes.

A special meeting of the board was called for Monday to further investigate the break. The committee includes County Commissioners E. V. Babcock and James Houlahen; Judge James H. Gray, Controller C. C. McGovern and Sheriff Robert H. Braun.

Wheeler Started With Caucus, Made Whole Party, Rogers Says

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Sept. 7.—Wayne B. Wheeler and Marcus Loew died. I happened to know them. Loew intimately for 20 years. Now a man has died in the movies that all the hysteria and eulogies that they generally bestow can rightly be used on. Marcus Loew was a man. He would have stood out in a legitimate business career. Wheeler will be hard to replace. He made a strong political party with nothing to start out with but a caucus. He was to the league what Mussolini is to Italy and what Mrs. Coolidge is to the Republican party. The best fight a man can put up is to have his enemies say if he passes out in the thick of the fight: "Well, I am glad he is out of the way."

Yours, the old Congressman,

WILL ROGERS.

OFFICIALS AID BEAVER ROAD OPENING

Twelve boroughs will participate in the opening of the new Beaver road, between Dixmont and Hays ville, late this afternoon. There will be a parade, which will start at 4 o'clock from the Bellevue borough hall. The county commissioners and several borough officials will participate in the exercises, which will be held on a viaduct one-half mile from Dixmont.

The new road is a link in a straight route connecting the Beaver Valley to Pittsburgh through Leetsdale, Sewickley, Glenfield, Emsworth and Bellevue.

Speakers will be Norman F. Brown, director of the County Department of Public Works; County Commissioners E. V. Babcock, Joseph G. Armstrong and James Houlahen; W. Heber Dithrich, county solicitor, and Park H. Martin, of the River Boulevard Association. J. C. Chaplin is chairman of the program.

BALDWIN FARM BARN BURNS

Failure to obtain a supply of water was a barrier to the efforts of three volunteer fire companies to save a burning barn on the Henry Hegmaier farm in Baldwin township last night. Live stock was rescued, but the building and its stores of hay and grain were destroyed, resulting in a loss exceeding $4,000. Fire companies from Curry, Overbrook and Brentwood responded to calls, but without water the firemen were mere spectators.

MINE PEACE HERE IS DISTANT

Regardless of the outcome of the conference between officials of the United Mine Workers of America and Illinois coal operators being held in Chicago today, the deadlock in the Western Pennsylvania bituminous coal mines will remain as tight as it was five months ago.

This was the sentiment expressed today by both operators and officials of the miners' union in this district. Officials of the two largest operators in this section emphatically said they did not intend to return to the union contract. P. T. Fagan, president of District No. 5, United Mine Workers of America, said he held little hope for a settlement in Western Pennsylvania in the near future.

NO EFFECT HERE

Both operators and union officials were agreed that the conference in Chicago may have a bearing on the situation in Indiana and Ohio, but both were equally frank to admit there will be little, if any, effect on the situation here.

As far as the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation was concerned, one of its attorneys said, the rejection of the Jacksonville wage scale of $7.50 a day was final. The corporation has opened several of its mines in Western Pennsylvania on an open shop basis and is well satisfied with the result, he said.

The attorney admitted he had received no instructions to change the policy of filing eviction suits against union miners occupying company houses. He said all suits now on file would be vigorously prosecuted. The Pittsburgh Terminal Corporation operates 10 mines and a majority of them are now functioning.

MINES OPEN SHOP BASIS

The Pittsburgh Coal Company, largest individual coal mining company in the world, has been operating mines in Western Pennsylvania for two years on a non-union basis. Company officials today said they had no intention of returning to the closed shop.

Union officials, however, have not become discouraged over the final outcome of the strike. Fagan said that the morale of his miners left nothing to be asked. He said that while the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation has opened some of its largest mines on a non-union basis, he had received private information to the effect that the results were unsatisfactory. He stated that there were several operators in Western Pennsylvania who would be willing to sign the union contract at almost any time now, but were unwilling to do so in view of the action of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation and the Pittsburgh Coal Company.

ENGROSSING DIFFERENT LIVELY DRAMATIC

By BEATRICE BURTON

Millie and Sally See Nye To the Train; the Former Is Taught to Drive

know whether I can live up to such a family as mine. I like you, and plenty of it."

"It's all settled, then, that you're going to marry John Nye?" asked Sally, as they turned into their own driveway and parked the brown car in the side backyard.

"Oh, I don't know. He hasn't said anything about it yet," Millie said. "But, gosh, it certainly looks as if he means business, doesn't it?" Leaning on the car, and giving me that cold vanity case and all those books and things. Oh, I'm sure he's serious, Sally. I can tell whether a man likes me or not."

In silence they climbed the stairs.

"I think I'll give Daisy a ring tomorrow, and see what's become of him," Millie mused ahead, watching Sally unlock the door. "Johnny said something about taking on a salesman in the office and I thought I might tell Daisy to go up and see him about it when he gets home. Daisy was a wonderful saleswoman for Burnall."

Sally shook her head gravely. "Oh, I wouldn't do that!" she cried. But when Millie asked her why, she had no answer for her.

She simply felt that it would not be fair of Millie to have one of her old sweethearts in the same office with herself and John Nye. It wouldn't be—she fished for the right word—sporting. And if Millie didn't really love John, why on earth did she want to marry him? Just for money?

Mrs. Jerome was still awake. She was sitting in her room, sipping a tall glass of hot water and groaning with a pain in her side.

"I ought to be in a hospital," she declared, "where I'd have someone to look after me. To think of Millie running off tonight and leaving me alone for hours! And I haven't had a bite of supper!"

Then, in the next breath, she asked Sally to bring her a plate of bread and butter. "It may stop this fearful gnawing in my stomach," she sighed, and ate every crumb of it with great gusto.

"I don't feel well, either," Millie told her, sitting on the arm of her chair. "I've had a headache for three days. If I didn't have to hold down a job I'd stay in bed all day tomorrow."

* * * time Sally noticed did not look well. are thin, and her enormous in her

"Isn't it fierce—terrible—awful to be poor?" she asked, looking up at Sally. "Here's poor mother, all run down. What she needs is sea air, and if I had money I could put her on a train and take her to some ocean resort or mountain hotel where she'd be able to rest."

"You two could go somewhere with that $200 check that Dad just sent," Sally reminded them. "You needn't give Bean and Mabel a hundred dollars, Mother. Your health comes first."

"Yes, but I've given them the whole thing already," faltered Mrs. Jerome, weakly. "They begged me for it this afternoon when we were driving home with Millie's young man—"

"And did you really give it to them?" shrieked Millie, jumping up from the arm of her mother's chair. "Did you give them the hundred that you'd solemnly promised to me for some new fall clothes? Why, if you did, you ought to be ashamed of yourself! You ought to be ASHAMED." Her voice rose higher and higher. Shaking with rage, she leaned over and grasped her mother's shoulders, glaring at her wildly. Then as Sally pulled her away, she suddenly crumpled up and slid out of her arms to the floor.

She lay there, beating the floor weakly with her clenched fists, and sobbing in great hoarse gasps.

Mrs. Jerome looked at her, solemn as an owl.

"She hasn't had a tantrum like that since she was a tiny girl," she remarked calmly. "When she was little I spanked her out of them."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

BUT Sally was sure that her mother was wrong. For she had seen Millie in tantrums before, and they never had been like this. They had been violent storms of weeping, violent stamping of feet and pounding of tables with hard little fists.

Now there was a note in Millie's sobbing that was more like pain than fury, and as Sally flew to her to lift her up from the floor she began to moan.

"I'm dying—o-o-o-o-o-o—" Her voice ended in a sharp little shriek of agony. Sally could almost believe what she said as she looked at her.

Her face, that had been white enough a few moments before, was a gray mask now and her eyes were turned up, showing the whites.

"Millie!" Sally whispered, sick with sudden terror. "What's wrong?" What on earth could have happened to make her look like this, she wondered. . . . And all in that minute, too!

"Get Dr. Ambleside," Sally said to her mother with stiff lips. "Tell him to rush!"

She lifted Millie's small, writhing figure to Mrs. Jerome's wide, soft bed, and began to strip off her soft, silk sports dress and her stockings and shoes.

And while she worked Millie never stopped her groans, and never once stopped turning and twisting in her pain. Perspiration—cold as raindrops—came out on her soft flesh.

Once she put her hand to her side and tried to say something. But her power to speak seemed to be gone. After a second she went on moaning like an animal in pain.

"The doctor will be here in a little while," panted Mrs. Jerome, coming back from the hall. "Oh, dear Lord, what can be the matter with her? Do you think it's some kind of fit—because she got so angry?"

Sally shook her head. "Anger wouldn't make her sick like this," she half-whispered, although Millie did not seem to hear anything that was going on around her. She was lying perfectly still now, her face almost hidden in the plump pillows that were piled three deep at the head of her mother's bed.

"She's in some kind of terrible pain. I think it's in her side," she went on, her eyes on the title of a book that lay on Mrs. Jerome's bedside table.

"When Love Is Kind" was the foolish title, and for one fleeting instant Sally forgot Millie and wondered if love ever was kind to anyone.

"Certainly not to me," she thought, briefly, glancing across the room to the silver-gilt clock that stood on the chiffonier between the open windows. . . . Five minutes had passed since her mother had telephoned the doctor. He ought to be on his way by this time. . . . He ought to be here in 10 minutes or so, if he had started already.

That 10 minutes seemed like a whole lifetime to Sally, sitting like a statue carved out of ivory on the edge of the bed, holding Millie's small hands in hers.

"Her hands—they're hot now," she whispered to Mrs. Jerome, who was standing motionless beside the door. "You come and feel them, Mother."

"Yes, they are hot. Her head's hot, too," Mrs. Jerome agreed. "Maybe she's just have an attack of indigestion like the ones I have . . . Heaven alone knows what she puts into her stomach, eating around in restaurants night after night the way she does."

"Didn't she have supper here with you and Mr. Nye tonight?" asked Sally, frowning. It was always hard for her to say "Mr. Nye" when she always thought of him as "John" in her own secret soul.

"Indeed she did not!" snapped Mrs. Jerome. "Sally, what's wrong with you? Can't you remember anything? Didn't I just finish telling you that she ran off somewhere with Nye and left me here without a bite to eat? And I just made up my mind I wouldn't get myself anything if I never ate again! To think of a woman having two grown daughters and having to get her own meals! Well, I just said to myself I wouldn't, and I didn't! She knew I wasn't feeling well, too, when she rushed out with that man of hers!"

Gas in the Stomach Is Truly Dangerous

Gas, Pain, Bloating and a feeling of fullness after eating are almost certain evidence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach.

Too much acid irritates the delicate stomach lining, frequently causing chronic Gastritis and dangerous Ulcers. Food ferments and sours, forming a gas that distends the stomach and often seriously affects the heart.

It is genuine folly to neglect such a condition or to treat with artificial digestive aids that cannot neutralize the stomach acid. A better way is to get from your druggist some Bisurated Magnesia (powder or tablets) and take a little after each meal. This famous but simple and inexpensive stomach sweetener and anti-acid can be depended upon to prove its value in less than five minutes. In most instances, relief comes instantly! Pleasant and perfectly harmless to use—Bisurated Magnesia does give wonderful relief in nine out of ten cases. Ask your Doctor or Druggist.

Quicksands of Love

By ADELE GARRISON

NOEL VERITZEN PUTS A FINISHING TOUCH TO JACK LESLIE.

AT the sound of Mary Harrison's voice demanding that Jack Leslie permit her to leave his apartment, to which he had induced her to come on the pretext of giving a party for her, I put out my hand and grasped Lillian's arm. Noel Veritzen had asked my aid to rescue the masked dancer from the plot of Jack Leslie. But here was Mary Harrison in her place. Or was Mary the masked dancer?

"Put one over on you that time, didn't I, sweetheart?" Leslie said. "Of course there's no party here, only just you and me. We're going to have a lovely party, and you aren't going home till you'll come with me on a nice long auto ride to a state where we can get married."

"Married!" Mary Harrison breathed. "To you!"

"Yes, you damned little iceberg, married to me," he said, "or—not—just as I happen to choose. I'm going to have my fill of kisses tonight, and I'll put you wise to the fact that it isn't the slightest use for you to scream. There's nobody above or below us.

Mary gave one frightened cry. Grantland said: "Now!" But before the word at which we all rushed through the door, Noel Veritzen had dashed into the other room and we heard his ringing voice: "There! You swine!" and the sound of a blow.

Lillian stopped and barred the way. "Let him have his moment," she whispered. We waited, while the sounds of berserk struggle went on in that other room, terminated by a heavy fall and a horrified cry from Mary. Then we rushed in to see Leslie upon the floor only half conscious, while Noel Veritzen leaned against the wall.

The dancer glared at Noel Veritzen.

"You cheap thief," he said. "At your old tricks, only this time you steal my girl."

Lee Chow slipped an efficient hand over his mouth, and Hugh Grantland took two strides to his side.

"One word more and I'll finish up what this boy has started," he said grimly. "Don't make any mistake. We're not going to the police about you, so that you'll have a chance to get your picture on the first page."

He stooped and whispered something in young Leslie's ear, then spoke crisply to Lee Chow.

"Is he able to telephone?"

"Yes."

"Then we'll get out of here." He turned to Noel Veritzen, lifted his right hand gently and looked at it.

Mary Harrison pulled her drooping figure erect in my arms.

"Oh!" she cried. "Is it broken, his right hand?"

The young violinist, who had sacrificed his means of livelihood for her, looked across at her with a twisted smile.

"It was cheap at the price," he said.

Hugh Grantland hurried us out of the house, leaving the dancer still prostrate on the floor. We climbed into the limousine and Hugh spoke to the driver.

"To the ——— Hospital," he said, "but signal the first taxi you meet."

When the taxi had ranged itself outside, Lee Chow climbed out and got into it.

We were swept up to the hospital, into which Hugh Grantland hustled Noel Veritzen, by this time colorless and almost swooning from pain. He had spoken a low word to Lillian as he left, and no sooner was he gone than my friend spoke kindly but firmly.

"No one is going to reproach you, Mary. I think you are having your own punishment, but you must explain how you managed this. Of course, it was Mrs. Baker—but how—"

The child shuddered in my arms. "I was going to stop this week," she wailed. "I was getting ashamed of myself for being such a lying little beast. Mrs. Baker told me to stage all that stunt—but she hates you, anyway. I'll take any punishment you name. Of course, this ends me with Mr. Veritzen and everybody. But this is the way we worked it:

"Mrs. Baker, who isn't nearly as old or lame as she pretends, was once an actress, and she can make up to look like almost anybody. She got a curly bob like mine, and she made up her face to look like mine, and she practised imitating my voice, and then each night she'd steal in through that unused door and get into my bed, while I'd go into her room and dress up in a wig like hers and get into those awful spectacles and that cloak."

Hugh Grantland returned to the limousine. He gave the number of my apartment to the driver, and then took his seat facing us.

When we entered the apartment it was a wild-eyed, disheveled, drawn-faced Dicky who rushed across the room to me.

"Oh, my God, Madge! I know now," he cried. "And you never can forgive me."

He sprang forward and grasped Mary's arm.

"You little hell-cat!" he gasped. "What did you try to poison me for and let your Auntie Madge be blamed for it?"

Laundering Silk Undies

There is a knack in laundering silk underwear successfully as in doing all other things. While silk does not shrink perceptibly, it gets stiff and harsh if washed improperly.

In preparing the underwear for the tub, it is always wise to remove the draw ribbons to wash separately, and also to look over the pieces for any stains. Perspiration is destructive to silk, rotting it out, so that it is wise to wash the garments, if not after each wearing, as frequently as possible. The stains should be removed first, generally by a little boiling water before the garment is washed in water with soap.

The amount of soap to use in preparing the suds for the underwear depends upon the hardness of the water and the amount of dirt on the garments. Use enough white soap, or flakes, in lukewarm water to make the water sudsy, and when smooth and nice put in the pieces. Swirl them around in the water quickly for a few minutes, then take each article and rub the soiled pieces, then drop it back into the water while you do each piece the same way, then swirl them around again and softly squeeze them between the hands. Wring out between the hands and put into a fresh lukewarm rinse, then lift the garments by hands or straps and drain for a few seconds, then lay over a line covered with a towel. In about five minutes place the garment on the board and press with a warm iron, picking out the lace with the fingers so that it will look like new when it dries. If lace is ironed it has an old look.

How do you suppose the countless people you meet have come to normal weight? Excess fat is not nearly so common as it was. It is recognized as unnecessary. Some employed abnormal exercise or diet, but the results were hard and not enduring.

Others used Marmola Prescription Tablets. That is the scientific method, based on modern research. It has been used for 19 years. So many have used it and told the results to others, that people now are using a very large amount.

The user of Marmola simply takes four tablets daily. She watches the results. New vitality comes with reduction. She ceases Marmola when she reaches the desired weight.

You should learn the results, as millions already know them. They are rarely too rapid, and they mean that the cause is corrected.

We urge you to try this modern, scientific method, then tell the results to others. That is how so many have been relieved of excess fat. Go now and learn what this right method means.

MARMOLA Prescription Tablets The Pleasant Way to Reduce

For the Lovelorn

Sorry

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a girl in my teens and have been going with a young man for a year, but lately he has been acting indifferent and I think it really is my fault, for he often told me I was so warm so cold towards him. Since the first night he came to see me he always told me he loved me, but I always laughed at him and kidded him along, instead of being a little serious, for I really loved him all the while, and now I think I've killed his love for me, as I thought that no matter what I did he would always come back, but it seems he has pulled one over on me. What shall I do to regain his love, for I love him lots. He is awfully good looking and can have a girl that he wants. He promised to call me up, but so far have failed to hear anything from him. Would it be proper to call him up, as I have often done so, but hate to call him now, as he may think I am trying to chase him. In case I should happen to see him on the road how should I act towards him? I have a lot of pride and am awfully stubborn at times. How can I overcome this? Thanking you an awful lot,

SORRY.

Don't call him up, but next time you see him be friendly and act toward him just as you always have. If he still likes you, he will respond. Only will power can overcome stubbornness. It is not a charming trait and you had better try to get rid of it.

Brown Eyes

DEAR MISS GALE:

Have written to you twice, but sorry to say your advice did not work for me. I am just writing to you this time to tell you of myself and see what you think of me. I am a young girl 14 years old. I am considered good looking. I try to dress nicely. Everyone says I am the prettiest girl of our family. (Of course I don't know if it's true or not. I don't drink, smoke, pet or kiss. I am very young to think of these things, but I thought I would tell you. I never leave the house at night unless mother or father is with me or one of my sisters. I am not an angel as some of your correspondents call it, I am telling the honest truth. I don't think much of a girl who leaves herself to such things as stick, etc. Miss Gale, I would like you to answer this and tell me what you think of me. I would also like you to answer to do the same. Please, Miss Gale, don't say I am too young to know what I am talking about.

BROWN EYES.

I hope you maintain those high ideals when you are old enough to go out with boys, my dear.

Us Incorporated

DEAR MISS GALE:

We are two girls of 18 summers. We have been going with each other for nine years and now that we are older we often have double dates. We agree with you on the drinking question as we have gone out with boys who have the habit of drinking and we find them disagreeable and disgusting. The smoking question depends upon the individual. We do not smoke but we go with girls that do, and we don't dislike them because it is their habit they are smoking, but more. We find that the boys do not like the girls that smoke any better than they do us. We think that the smoking question depends entirely upon the boy you are with. If we like them we let them know by letting them kiss us. We would like to know what kind of dance a boy getting his own around a girl. We do not have "standing" because we do not believe in standy company. We have been proposed to but we think we are too young to settle down. We are allowed four dates a week providing we are in by 12:30. We go to night clubs often and have a good time even though a fast crowd goes there. Do you think it all right for us to go to those clubs? We remain, US INCORPORATED.

Don't you really think that kissing is cheapening, my dears? If you don't now you will some day. No, I don't think it all right for girls your age to go to such places. We are known by the company we keep, you know.

SAYINGS OF MRS. SOLOMON

By HELEN ROWLAND

"NEXT!"

Verily, verily, my Daughter, by his HAIR-CUT shall ye know a man.

For behold, the bachelor seeketh a "trim" that is correct; but the married man seeketh a close-cut that will LAST, even though it causeth him to resemble a "trusty."

HELEN ROWLAND

The Beau Brummel, the Sheik, and the poet, alike, cling affectionately unto the romantic forelock and leave inviolate the natural wave. But the hard-boiled business man taketh his hair-cut "straight," and prayeth only that it shall ESCAPE attention!

The incipiently bald man seeketh the barber only at the "last call." He watcheth the shears with dark suspicion and winceth as the precious tendrils fall, one by one, from the base of the skull. Passionately doth he urge the tonsorial artist to brush carefully from East to West; for the hairs of his head are indeed numbered and catalogued!

Lo, the College Youth calleth for spikenard and myrrh and much "dressing." He imploreth the barber to "train" his locks to "stay put." He reveleth in a high polish and yearneth for a patent-leather effect.

But the snappy salesman demandeth the latest wrinkle, and trusteth the wielder of the shears to turn him out a 1927 model, even while he devoteth all his attention to the blonde manicurist.

He cometh in fragrant with the breath of last night's revels, and emergeth a chastened and denatured man, smelling of scented soap and purest hair tonic, and feeling as one that hath received absolution!

* * *

Go to. To every man a hair-cut is a duty, a penance or a sacred rite.

But unto an hen-pecked husband, it is a TREAT and a secret excitement.

He entereth apologetically with that "fear-of-waking-the-baby" expression.

He waiteth patiently for his turn, nor hasteneth the end of his adventure.

He discusseth ways and means with the barber, and bargaineth to get the most for his money.

* * *

For unto him this is his monthly indulgence, like unto the visit to the picture-palace or the baseball bleachers. And he feeleth thrillingly wicked, when he goeth forth smelling of sweet toilet water and with the consciousness of violet talcum upon his neck.

* * *

Behold, a lover consulteth his sweetheart's preference, and seeketh to have his hair cut in the way SHE liketh it best. But a married man findeth out first how his wife liketh it, and then hath it cut the OTHER way.

For this is his favorite method of asserting his "independence!"

Thus is every man's hair-cut a symbol of his ruling passion!

Milady Beautiful

By LOIS LEEDS

THE OLIVE BRUNETTE'S COLOR PROBLEM.

IT is sometimes hard for a girl to recognize her own type and make the most of it, if she happens to admire another type of beauty. The swarthy brunette, for instance, whose ideal of feminine loveliness is a pink-and-white blonde, bleaches her hair and loads her face with powder in a hopeless effort to approximate the unattainable ideal. The result cannot fail to be a pitiable figure.

Understanding her own type, however, a girl can realize her full share of beauty, but in no other way. When she uses in make-up and clothes colors that are unbecoming to her individual style of beauty, she loses her charm.

Earlier this week I gave color suggestions for the medium blond type and today I have some for an entirely different type—the olive brunette, whose hair and eyes are dark brown or black and whose skin is olive with a warm glow of color in the cheeks. Her ortich natural coloring permits the use of strong hues in clothes. Bright red, rust and brick-red are excellent as entire costumes or as trimming. Embroideries in gold or brilliant oriental colors are becoming.

White should be avoided, as it makes the skin appear too dusky. Deep cream may be worn, however, and also pink of a dull shade, coral and apricot. Pink-lavender may be used in sheer fabrics. Ecru is good and so is deep yellow, mahogany; deep brown and bronze green are permissible, but they should be brightened with touches of light color. Black and midnight blue should be trimmed with dull pink or bright red and yellow. Taupe is seldom becoming.

Besides choosing the right colors in clothes, the olive brunette should give careful thought to the right shade of face powder. It should be dark enough not to show when applied to the skin. A white or flesh powder on a dark skin is inexcusable. When artificial color is applied to the lips a scarlet shade is better than dark red in most cases since it harmonizes with the warm skin tints. Orange or dark red rouge may be used, but oftentimes a more pleasing effect is achieved by omitting rouge so that the clear olive tone of the skin may be seen. Since it is not natural for this type to have very red cheeks, any color that is used looks artificial no matter how skillfully it is applied. The lips may be tinted, however, if they are pale.

The olive skin does not freckle, but it tans to a deeper hue in summer. It is a good plan to use a bleaching pack of buttermilk and cornmeal once a week. This will not, of course, make the skin fair, but will keep it from being darkened by the sun to a deeper olive.

Quick Pickles

These pickles are for immediate use. Select small pickles of even size, wash well, then place in a deep yellow crock, cover with a light brine to which add a teaspoonful of alum. Let stand for four hours then rinse in cold water and pack in the clean crock. Scald enough vinegar to cover the pickles, adding a generous sized spice bag. After scalding for five minutes turn over the pickles, place the spice bag in the center, cover and let stand for four or five days and the pickles are ready for use. If the vinegar looks slightly cloudy remove the spice bag. Fifty to 75 pickles are enough to do at once.

Ice for a Cough

Coughing, sometimes so violent and long continued as to be both acutely painful and harmful, generally can be stopped in a short time by rubbing the throat and chest with a piece of ice. The ice should be moved gently over the throat until the skin becomes very red.

Bruises and burns now are treated with ice water rather than hot water. Ice water is applied to the injury as soon as possible.

HOW TO KEEPWELL

by Royal S. Copeland M.D.

U.S. Senator from New York

Whining and Moping Signs of Ill Health.

WHEN you feel like pouting and whining and moping, look yourself over to see what is the matter. There will be found a physical basis for these symptoms.

DR COPELAND

The mind and nervous system react to the state of the body. One of the trying and difficult effects of physical disability is neurasthenia, or "nervous prostration," as it is called by a good many.

City life has a tendency to cause neurasthenia. The noises, bright lights, late hours, late suppers, rich food, loss of sleep, the hurry and bustle—indeed, all the natural accompaniments of city life are liable to exhaust the nervous forces and vitality.

Certain races are peculiarly liable to nervous prostration, while others are almost immune. Some families, too, are in greater danger of it than others.

The better the youthful training, the more thorough the early discipline of mind, and the more nearly correct the manner of living all through life, the more favorable is the chance of escaping nervous prostration. Other ailments of the nervous system and brain may be avoided, too.

Parents should bear in mind the importance of training their children. It is no kindness to your child to give in to his whims. His wrong impulses should be curbed in a kindly but firm manner. The time will come when he will thank you for a control which at the moment seemed most irritating to him.

Night workers, no matter how easily they appear to carry their duties, never seem to get a sufficient amount of rest and refreshment. In consequence, they are particularly liable to nervous breakdowns.

Easily acquired fatigue and that "tired feeling" all the time are early symptoms of nervous exhaustion. Unfortunately, when you are all worn out and seem to need sleep, sleep just won't come. Insomnia—inability to sleep—is one of the signs of neurasthenia.

Another prominent symptom is fear. Fear of death, fear of being indoors, fear of crowds—any form of fear may be associated with this ailment.

There may be other abnormal sensations. One of these is a feeling as if there were a weight on top of the head. Or it may be a sensation of a tight band around the head. Sometimes it produces a pain in the back of the head, or between the shoulders.

Perversions of smell or taste, as if there were a bad odor in the air, or a bitter substance in the mouth, are other signs of nervous disturbance. In short, neurasthenia causes all sorts of disagreeable disturbances.

The best way to deal with this trouble is to live such a life as will not produce it! When once it comes there must be a right-about-face in your manner of living. There must be a return to normal and sensible ways of living. With improved physical health, the mental and nervous symptoms will disappear.

"Adam and Evil" Photoplay, Good Music and Novelties Mark Opening of New Penn

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

THE Penn Theater, the formal opening of which was abandoned Monday, when news of the death of Marcus Loew was received, swung its doors open to the public at 6 o'clock last evening the first show being given at 7 o'clock. In the interim patrons of the theater had opportunity for obtaining a view of the beautiful appointments and decorations of the new house. The program originally planned for the opening was presented and it proved to be one of the most entertaining and certainly the most novel, varied and original bills ever presented in a motion picture theater here.

The feature picture was "Adam and Evil," a farce of the most farcical type with situations that caused uproarious laughter. It concerns the funny mixups that occur when a man pretends he is his twin brother and makes love to his own wife to quiet her suspicions when she finds him attending a gay party in company of a "vamp." The fun of that situation is multiplied when the real twin brother turns up and is asked to take care of the "vamp" lady and makes love to his brother's wife instead.

Lew Cody and Aileen Pringle are Adam and Eve and they are a great comedy team, this being Miss Pringle's first attempt at such work, in which she appears to be right at home. Cody never did better than he does in this role.

The stage feature was Ted Lewis and his jazz orchestra and two girl dancers and a diminutive male stepper, appearing anonymously. Lewis is a chap who mixes brains with his tunes and fooleries. His act was rewarded with applause of the kind that is labeled "thunderous."

The musical program, especially that portion of it that was under the direction of Don Albert, guest conductor, was really worthy of more extended and more revealing review than it is possible to give here. The selection played was Tschaikowsky's "Overture 1812," which was presented with effects that heightened its value, lighting playing an important part in the presentation.

This number gave the audience its first view of one of the novel arrangements of the new house, an orchestra seated in a platform that ascends and descends, disappearing from view when a full stage or screen view is essential and appearing at stage level when its performance is featured. The organ or piano can be raised or lowered separately or in connection with the entire orchestra.

Ken Widener demonstrated this wonderful organ in a special number "The Organ Speaks," a novelty in which the instrument gave forth notes of the violin and those resembling the human voice.

Another novelty was "The Voice of the Nightingale," combining motion pictures and music in an appealing little creation.

As a memorial of the late Marcus Loew a group of singers behind a gauze curtain, with only their faces showing, sang "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

The arrangement of the program and its successful presentation is a tribute to the skill of Louis K. Sidney, under whose personal supervision it was given.

Theaters To Be Closed As A Tribute To Marcus Loew

As a mark of respect to the late Marcus Loew, the Penn and Aldine theaters will remain closed after today's shows until 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Not only are the Loew theaters to be closed but other theaters as well. All houses throughout the entire United States, owned or operated by the Stanley Company of America will be closed until 2 o'clock on Thursday.

Speaking of Mr. Loew, John J. McGuirk, president of the Stanley Company, said "The motion picture industry has lost one of the ablest, most respected and beloved pioneers."

Shark Teeth Feature Of Drama About South Seas

The largest collection of shark's teeth in Southern California is now appearing in "No Place to Go." The teeth were gathered after a vigorous search of the curio shops of the city, to be used as adornments of the South Sea Island cannibals in this picture, which Mervyn LeRoy is directing, with Mary Astor, Lloyd Hughes and Virginia Lee Corbin in the featured roles.

The story concerns a group of bored New Yorkers who seek romance in the South Seas. Miss Astor and Hughes leave their palatial yacht by stealth and go to a lonely island to find "freedom and romance" in its lonely spaces. Instead they find it inhabited by a tribe of cannibals.

CHIROPRACTORS' BOARD PETITIONS DISMISSED

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Sept. 7.—Petitions filed by Belmont county chiropractors to initiate a law creating a separate board of examiners were held insufficient and dismissed in court yesterday. The Belmont County Medical Society brought the action claiming one person signed several names of electors to the petition.

WAR VETERAN CALLED TO CHURCH IN MERCER

MERCER, Pa., Sept. 7.—The Rev. Dr. O. H. L. Mason, of the Van Nest Presbyterian Church of New York, has been called to the Second Presbyterian Church of this place by a vote of the congregation. Dr. Mason is a World War veteran. He was a close friend of Theodore Roosevelt.

BABY IS OVERCOME AS MEAT BOILS DRY

FRANKLIN, Pa., Sept. 7.—When meat boiled dry, the three-months-old baby of Mr. and Mrs. Merle Miller was overcome by the fumes. A pulmotor was used to revive the child. The mother returned just in time to prevent the babe being suffocated.

Two Signed -:- New Contract -:- Up in Air -:- Cast Listed

BILLIE DOVE'S next vehicle is to be "Louisiana," for which two of her supporting players have been signed. They are Gilbert Roland and Noah Beery.

PATSY RUTH MILLER is the principal to a contract whereby she will play the lead in several productions to be released during the season of 1927-1928. This should dispel quite a lot of gloom.

WE DON'T MEAN Lillian Gish is up in the air, but that her plans are unsettled. Both Miss Gish and David Wark Griffith have denied the truth of rumors that she will go to Griffith after her present work ends.

BARBARA BEDFORD is to be in the "Girl From Gay Paree." So are Lowell Sherman, Malcolm McGregor, Walter Hiers and Betty Blythe. This is film insurance.

Sweden Is Well Represented In Cast of "The Divine Woman", Greta Garbo's Starring Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—If Greta Garbo has any temperamental outbursts in "The Divine Woman" she will give her exhibitions in Swedish. And why not? With Lars Hansen, the Swedish actor, as her leading man and Victor Seastrom, Swedish director, handling the megaphone, English will be a lost language in the M. G. M. lot for the next few weeks.

I suspect Irving Thalberg had an ulterior motive when he made the cast of "The Divine Woman" so Scandinavian in nationality. Not alone because he felt Miss Garbo would be more at home with her own countrymen, but because there is no one who make better pictures than the old Swedish Biography Company. These three were all an important part of the personnel in that celebrated organization and there is every reason to believe they will all repeat their work in "The Divine Woman."

This is the motion picture title for Gladys Unger's play, "Starlight." I do not know why Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer changed the title, and care less. Only it is confusing because the majority of people believe "The Divine Woman" and E. Barrington's story, "The Divine Lady," are one and the same.

Rod LaRocque and Leatrice Joy are to be reunited again in "The Blue Danube." Rod and Leatrice haven't been screen sweethearts since the good old days when DeMille was turning out society dramas with decorative drawing rooms and fanciful bathrooms. Rod was really cast for another picture and expected to begin work as soon as he returned from his honeymoon. After he came back he was told what a great picture "The Blue Danube" is expected to be and urged him to cancel his other engagements and join the troupe. He did so last week and probably won't be sorry since the cast is one of the most pretentious since "The King of Kings." Joseph Schildkraut, Senna Owen, Alan Hale and Robert Edeson are numbered in that galaxy of favorites.

The eye of the exhibitors are on Ken Maynard, the western actor, whose thrillers are bringing home the bacon, so to speak. Maybe you do not think Richard Rowland and Watterson Rothacker realize young Maynard's popularity? Only last week they decided to make "The Red Raider" his last picture, a special. Charles Rogers, producer of the Maynard pictures, has let it be known that the next epic is to be "The Caravan Trail" and that it deals with a traveling circus in pioneer days. Harry J. Brown will direct and from the account set me it sounds like very promising. Of course, you can never tell what will happen at this early stage of the game.

I will say for Corinne Griffith she is not only a young lady who knows what she wants, but she is a young lady who gets what she wants.

The distinction may be a fine one, but it is important. At least six weeks ago Corinne told me she felt the ideal leading man for "The Garden of Eden" was Charles Ray. Then came word that Gilbert Roland had been put in the part and I naturally thought all discussion in that direction was ended. Yesterday I was told from a confidential source in Hollywood that Charles Ray will play opposite Miss Griffith in "The Garden of Eden." The picture is already three weeks in production, so I assume Mr. Ray has started to work immediately.

Aristocratic Collie, Movie Veteran, In "Ramona"

"Jean," aristocratic Scotch collie, who has appeared in more than 100 photoplays, has placed her paw of approval on the dotted line of a contract calling for her appearance throughout the entire production of "Ramona." Edwin Carewe's name appeared on the other dotted line. "Jean" is regarded as one of the most remarkable screen canines of the present day. When Carewe made "Mighty Lak a Rose," he used "Jean," and her work in that picture has never been forgotten.

The dog will be seen as companion to Dolores del Rio, star of the film, and enacting the title role.

ACTRESS RETURNING TO PITT STOCK CAST

Mabel Kroman will return to the cast of the George Sharp Production Stock Company, in "The Show Off," next week. Miss Kroman was given a rest last week, after having appeared in every play since the opening of season on May 9.

Clark and McCullough, of "Music Box" fame, are the two stars of "The Ramblers," which opened the new season in the Alvin. There is a matinee of "The Ramblers" today.

There is a matinee in the Nixon today of George White's new musical comedy, "Manhattan Mary," starring Ed Wynn.

An extra feature of "Let's Go," next week in the Gayety, will be Annabelle Allison as "lady of the moon," swinging above the heads of the audience while she carols.

VETERAN PLAYER SIGNS NEW MOVIE CONTRACT

Edward Connelly, veteran player of both stage and screen, has been signed to a new contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. This makes Connelly in point of service the oldest employe of the organization. Connelly first went into pictures, after a long stage career, 13 years ago, with the old Metro company. He has remained with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Company ever since.

Pay Storage Charges On Liquor or Lose It, Court Orders

Morris Rosenbloom was ordered in Common Pleas Court this morning to pay storage charges on 1,089 cases of whisky, at one time stored in his name in the Sam Thompson Distillery. The charges amount to $7,911, according to the suit filed by the distilling company. Unless the charges are paid within 30 days, the distillery, according to provisions of the court order, may seize and sell the liquor, which has been moved to another distillery.

ROY DEL RUTH DIRECTS MAY M'AVOY PICTURE

May McAvoy will be starred in "If I Were Single" (temporary title), as soon as she completes "Roulette" on which she is now at work. Andre Beranger already has been signed to play in her support. Roy Del Ruth, director of "The First Auto," will handle the megaphone for "If I Were Single."

PAT HARMON HAS ROLE IN PICKFORD PHOTOPLAY

The distinction of being the toughest-looking heavy on the screen is often attributed to Pat Harmon, well-known character actor who is now playing in "My Best Girl" Mary Pickford's current comedy-romance of the 5-and-10-cent stores. Harmon is blessed with a flexible countenance, which can be twisted into a face that gives spectators the shudders. His present role, however, does not call for his worst facial efforts, as he enacts the part of a hard-boiled guardian of the law instead of his customary portrayal of a menacing "vill-yun."

CHILLY SAUCE

By CHILLY DOYLE

THE outcome of the games did not tend to widen the gap that separates the Bushwackers from the Giants and Cardinals. The Polo Grounders are in a position to deadlock the Braves "real sweet" but the Pittsburghers are in a fighting mood now and with nearly every regular in the condition the team should be able to give a good account of itself.

IT IS to be hoped also that the Pirates will show a smarter brand of baseball as it goes down the home stretch. The effortless and expected rout is one of the worst plays in the Pittsburgh repertoire. The bunt as an unexpected move is always desirable but the senseless attempts appears to be overworked.

A FINE boy and clever baseball player is Adam Comorosky. The worst the Pirates could wish for him is that he is able to do well in the National League as he has done in the minors. But Cooperstown is not a Cuyler, yet.

MANAGER Bush states he will use Cuyler any time he thinks his presence on the bench will help the team. Nobody will say that Bush is unfair so it would not be surprising if Cuyler is back in the game in some position before the curtain goes down. There is strong talk, however, that Traynor and Bush will trade Cuyler this winter, the move of yesterday lending strength to the feeling.

SOMEBODY started a report that Cuyler was weak in driving in runs. That is true for this season. But the figures for 1925 and 1926 prove another case. In 1925, Cuyler drove in more than 100 runs and scored 144, leading the league in run-making. He was second to Carey in stolen bases that season. Last year Cuyler was first in run-making and stolen bases and he drove in with a few of a hundred tallies, he and Fl Traynor leading the club.

ON a combination basis of run-making and driving in tallies in the two-year period Cuyler is on the top of the majors or close to it. The club officials probably acted wisely in the comparatively small penalty they handed him. On the other hand figures should not be distorted that show the worth of the player in two big seasons previous to this year.

CUYLER is having a bad year, although he is still over the .300 mark in batting. He was setting a terrific pace when he fractured his ankle in the early part of the race. Stars are not supposed to have off seasons, it would seem. Cobb, Speaker, Ruth, Sisler and others are reckoned to hold to a fast pace and they are well paid for it. But others run into bad years, as witness the case of Scoops Carey and Clyde Barnhart of last season, and Lester Bell of this season.

From College Grid Camps

WEST VIRGINIA.

JACKSONS MILL, W. VA., Sept. 7.—Coach Rodgers shortened the length of the workout yesterday afternoon, but the severity of the practice was increased to such an extent that the West Virginia University football squad was composed of 42 very tired athletes when the final "that's all" sounded. The linemen and backs were given a long siege of going down under punts after tackling the receiver. In the practice, which is a "Man killer," Latham, Meisel, Ted Nixon, Dutch Nixon, Hodgson, Garrett, Keefer, Vachrous, Brewster, Talbott, Big Sleepy Gluck and Little Sleepy Gluck did some fierce tackling. The backs were given a long session of blocking ends who were going down under punts, and the practice was concluded by pairing off the players and having them take turns at making flying tackles at each other. Yesterday was "tackling" day at Jacksons Mill.

The 180-pound freshman eleven is all set to go and the B team is nearly as large as the A's. The first varsity eleven are rapidly gaining smoothness in their signal practice and the scrimmages are giving Coach Martin and his assistants a line on their prospects.

GROVE CITY.

GROVE CITY, Pa., Sept. 7.—Coach Charles Berry arrived here today to take charge of the opening football practice of the college season this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Seventy-four candidates for the 1927 Crimson team will greet the new coach. Most of these men will be new players. Only six letterwinners from last year's championship squad will be on hand. Those six men are: Clayton Anderson, John Weikman and Marcus Hanks, ends; Robert Phillips, Capt. James McCormick, center; Virgilio Paterini, halfback.

GENEVA.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Sept. 7.—Jo Bo McMillin, of Geneva College, his grid squad down to 45 men yesterday, and more will be cut out later. Prospects are bright a wonderful season here. The years' lineup show remarkable ability. However, the general forecast for the Red and White eleven is only fair.

Today the team is getting down to its strenuous work, with tackling and ending taking up the greater part of squad's time. On Friday the first change will be held.

McMillin fears the team will not be in good shape for its inaugural contest against Davis-Elkins, on September 24, although he is pinning along making the best of everything.

WAYNESBURG.

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Sept. 7.—The Waynesburg College football training camp opened here today when about 35 gridiron athletes answered Coach Kate Easterday's initial call for candidates for the Yellow Jacket varsity. Included in the men to report today were a number of men from last year's squad, while other members of last year's varsity are expected to report tomorrow.

WESTMINSTER.

NEW WILMINGTON, Pa., Sept. 7.—Coach Dyke Beede and Assistant Coach John Lawther, of the Westminster College football squad, put significance in the words Labor Day when they called on practice sessions for the day. A number of injuries has sent four men to the sidelines, while four more, who are able to stand the strenuous work as yet failed to report.

W. Va. Team Wins Pa. Pennant.

ROGERSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 6.—By an odd quirk of fate, a West Virginia team has won the Greene County, Pa., 1927, baseball championship. At the outset of the season, the Wana, W. Va., team was admitted to the Greene County circuit. Today, the Greene County pennant is in Wana, W. Va.

Veiled Charge Lie, Jack Says

By FRANKLIN GRANT,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—The usually calm and good-natured Jack Dempsey was somewhat wrathy today over the publication in a national magazine of an article which veiled the charge that the Dempsey-Tunney fracas was "one of those things."

All that the ex-champion said cannot be repeated in print because for the first time in the memory of men who have known him for years he dealt in profanity and then used some of its superlatives.

"The story is a lie and the man who wrote it knows in his heart that it is a lie," exploded Dempsey. "I hear much about fakers who get punch-drunk and go goofy and I'm beginning to believe that a few sporting writers go that way, too.

"Some of the finest friends I have in the world are sporting writers. Also some of my bitterest enemies belong to the same profession. Just about all that I am, all that I have accomplished, I owe to the newspapers and the men who work for them, and to my dying day I will be grateful to them as a group, whether friends—or fair enemies.

"If a writer thinks I am a ham faker, I never take exception to his statements. If he dislikes me for one thing or another and wants to put me on the pan and grill me, that is his privilege and his newspaper's right. But when a writer reaches a point where he tries by trick language or by quoting fictitious persons, to create the impression that Tunney and I faked the fight in Philadelphia he's just a plain liar.

"No sane thinking man who applies logic to that fight in Philadelphia can find one iota of reasoning to support the belief that I 'sold out' to Tunney."

DISCREDITS RUMOR

Retention of that title through victory in Philadelphia meant to me not merely a continuance of the prestige and the glory that went with it, but it also meant from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 that I could have gained by getting the big end of another fight as champion—or two or three more as champion.

"Let's assume, for the moment, that I was willing to sell out. My price wouldn't have been less than $1,000,000. Who would have paid it to me? How could Tunney have paid me $1,000,000 when Tunney admits that he was flat broke when we were matched for the fight—and broke until he was paid his end for fighting me.

"So cold facts eliminate Tunney from any such possible idea.

"There's only one other source to whom I could have made the sale. That's the gamblers. Inasmuch as the wildest dealers in estimates of the cleanup on Tunney's victory do not place those winnings at more than $750,000 by any single individual, and fix as the grand total won $600,000 by the whole group in which that particular gambler was included—well, isn't the fake story reduced to a lie by the most extravagant figures?

"For—who ever heard of a gambling clique paying a man $1,000,000 so it could win $600,000—and end up a $400,000 loser?

PROOF IN WAY OF LOSING.

"If I had faked in the fight—if I had gone into the ring for the deliberate purpose of losing, does any normal human think I'd have lost in the way I did? If I had been in there only to lose, does anyone suppose that for 10 full rounds I would have waded into Tunney, taken the merciless fire of his blows and had my face punched to such a pulp that it was hardly recognizable for a month?

"The story is a lie—a deliberate lie. The thing that puzzles me about the manufacture of such a lie is whether the telling of it is an effort to put the smudge on me for losing by a fake or whether the writer was attempting to take a shot at Tunney by trying to create the impression that he is a champion not because of his greatness but because he 'bought' the title—or had somebody buy it for him."

The only signs of commotion around the Manassa Mauler's training camp today were the chug-chugging of a track scraper, the creaking of machines digging a hole for a lake inside the course and the snores of none other than William Harrison Dempsey. He did not work.

Elopement Easily Wins Sun-Telegraph Purse At Ebensburg

EBENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 7.—Upwards of 5,000 people attended the fourth day of the annual meeting of the Cambria Fair Association here yesterday. Favorites again fared well and the talent was rather hit as only one of the short priced horses came down in front.

The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph purse was won by Chapemont, who was never extended and won easily up over the 6 furlong round. Enos and Miss Parnell were the runners up in the order named.

The Altoona purse attracted the best distance horses on the grounds and was won in the last stride by Gee, after a driving finish with the favorite Jig Time. It was one of the prettiest finishes of the day and blanket could have covered the first three horses.

NOTES of the BOXERS

PETE ZIVIC and Kid Francis, lightweight champion of Italy, fought 10 rounds to a draw in the semi-final to a bout between Johnny Grosso and Jack DeMave, while Grosso won at the Queensboro Club, New York, last night. Reports state that Francis really deserved the decision. Tony Ross dropped a 10-round decision to Sully Dando at Fort Harrison, Ind.

Chuck Wiggins, one of Gene Tunney's sparring partners, beats Tiny Jim Herman at Evansville, Ind., tomorrow night.

Stanislaus Loayza and Bruce Flowers, Negro lightweight, are the main bout of a show in New York tonight. Marco Polo, McKees Rocks lightheavyweight, meets Chief Hickman in the eight-round main bout at the Fort Hamilton, (N. Y.) reservation.

Leo Clements, of Jeannette, and Young Posey, of the Homestead Library Club, will meet in the heavyweight mill bout of the boxing-wrestling program under the auspices of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at the Hunter street playgrounds, Wilkinsburg, tomorrow night. Three other boxing bouts and five mat tussles are scheduled.

Ralph Martan, of Bloomfield, denies he ran out of his match with Bobby Young at Duquesne last night, as announced. He says he reported overweight and was not permitted to go on. He is ready to box Young any time.

PANTHERS HOLD LONG DRILL

CAMP HAMILTON, WINDBER, Pa., Sept. 7.—You could have fried an egg on the sun-baked practice field yesterday when Coach Jack Sutherland and his somewhat sunburned Pitt football squad took their second workout of the season, but the torrid weather failed to alter any of Jock's extensive training plans.

It was a sizzling, blistering day, but late in the afternoon a breeze came up the valley and the Panther gridders, who are fast hardening into the semblance of a real football team, jumped into their work with renewed vigor.

Sutherland is going to have his men in perfect shape before he calls for any extensive rough work, and he sent his men through another round of conditioning exercises yesterday. Today he may prescribe something more advanced, but he had not decided this morning.

Alex Stevenson sent his line candidates through a long hour at the charging sled, while the backs and ends went down under passes and punts. Whitey Hagen was getting off some long spirals and Capt. Welch, Edwards, Heban, Parkinson and Bowen took care of the passing.

The afternoon practice ended with a signal drill. Jock had three teams running plays and they executed them with snap.

GRID TEAMS COMBINE

WILKINSBURG TO FACE HARD GRID SCHEDULE

The schedule mapped out for the Wilkinsburg High gridders this fall is undoubtedly the most strenuous since the Holy City lads won their last W. P. I. A. L. title in 1922. Only one game will be played away from home and that will be the encounter with Kittanning listed as second on the card.

The high light of the first half of the schedule will be the resumption of athletic with Greensburg when the Brown and White makes its first appearance at Graham Field on October 22.

Coach Carroll is now pointing his men for the opener with Avalon and hopes to get off to a great start in this year's campaign.

Dubuque Cops Pennant Though Loop Throws Out 15 Victories

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—(A.P.)—Although 15 victories were taken from her total season's play by league directors because of violation of league regulations, Dubuque, Ia., has won the championship of the Mississippi Valley circuit by a margin of two percentage points over Waterloo.

A month ago Dubuque was dumped from the leadership to fourth place when the directors threw out 15 victories as a penalty for Dubuque's employment of Mel Harder, pitcher optioned by the Omaha Western League Club.

Ten days ago Dubuque had climbed back to the lead, but was set down again when President Hill ruled out two victories that had been credited to Rock Island over Waterloo.

A double victory Labor Day over Cedar Rapids gave Dubuque the title.

Dubuque's final standing was .617 and Waterloo's .616. Burlington, Marshalltown, Moline, Cedar Rapids, Rock Island and Ottumwa finished below them in that order.

In Case Tunney Forgets

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor

"I CAME to box Dempsey, not to fight him," Champion Gene Tunney is credited with having said on his arrival in Chicago the other day to put the finishing touches on his training work.

Now, if he only will remember that when he enters the ring, he'll score his second victory over the one-time man-killer. But it seems to run in our mind that Jack Sharkey said something similar a short while back, but forgot to remember when the test came.

"I CAN'T see how anybody can pick Tunney against Dempsey," a correspondent writes in. "Why, even his name rhymes with 'funny.'"

Yes, and with "money," too.

WHICH reminds us of a crack Leo P. Flynn, the man who won the Sharkey fight for Jack the same as the K. P.'s won the war for Uncle Sam, made out at Dempsey's cottage at White Sulphur Springs, N. Y., the Sunday before that memorable Fair or Foul embroglio. It gives some idea of how Gene stacks up in the estimation of the world's greatest trainer, to hear the w. g. t. tell about it.

"Dempsey will knock this fellow for a loop in about six rounds," Leo P. orated. "Say, Dempsey's not fighting a Gene Tunney this trip. It's only Jack Sharkey that he'll go against. A bum who can't take 'em in the body."

THE odds out Chicago way, we hear, have dropped from 9 to 5 to 7 to 5 on Tunney to win. Nothing has happened to cause them to drop, so they may be set down as the professional gamblers' figures, which are changed from time to time to feel out the betting public.

STANLEY SIMMONS and Charley Tarzan have been matched for one of the feature preliminaries of the show the Veterans of Foreign Wars of Allegheny county are going to stage in Duquesne Garden, Monday night, September 26, and Patsy Gallagher, the South Side featherweight, will appear in another bout on the card.

Here's Where Tickets For Big Fight Are Going

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—(A.P.)—A partial list of ticket purchases for the Tunney-Dempsey fight, made public today, revealed the destination of some several thousand choice tickets.

Movie actors have a block of 200. Mayor Thompson and Gov. Small have blocks of 600 each, and the Illinois Athletic Club has a block of 1,200.

Twenty-five hundred tickets have gone to the South Park Board, which controls Soldier Field, where the fight is to take place September 22. The Madison Square Garden Club, New York, has purchased 1,300, while James Carey, Rochester, N. Y., has been allotted 750.

A block of 125 to New Orleans, 125 to Dallas and 100 to Fort Worth indicate fight interest in the far South. Tacoma, Wash., fans have purchased 125 tickets en bloc.

The Illinois Boxing Commission took 2,500 tickets and the Chicago press 1,200. Out-of-town press reservations have been 700 to date.

PIRATES

Manager Bush intends to send his leading ace—Carmen Hill—to Fogarty Knoll. Manager Hendricks has selected Red Lucas, the clever utility star and pitcher, to oppose Hill. Red stopped the Cubs on his last appearance, but he is apt to meet with sterner opposition in the Oakland Orchard.

After finishing the home slate with the Reds this afternoon the Pirates will enjoy a whole day of rest. Today and tomorrow were open dates on the original card of the clubs, but a rain postponement brought this afternoon's frolic on the card. On Friday the Phillies will be here to begin a three-game series.

HARLEE CLUB DRILLS

The football team about to be placed on the field by the recently organized Harlee Athletic and Social Club of North Side, is expecting to have a very successful season. The squad under the watchful eye of Coach Wiemore, former Quantico marine, went through a stiff signal drill last night preparatory to a scrimmage session to be held tomorrow evening.

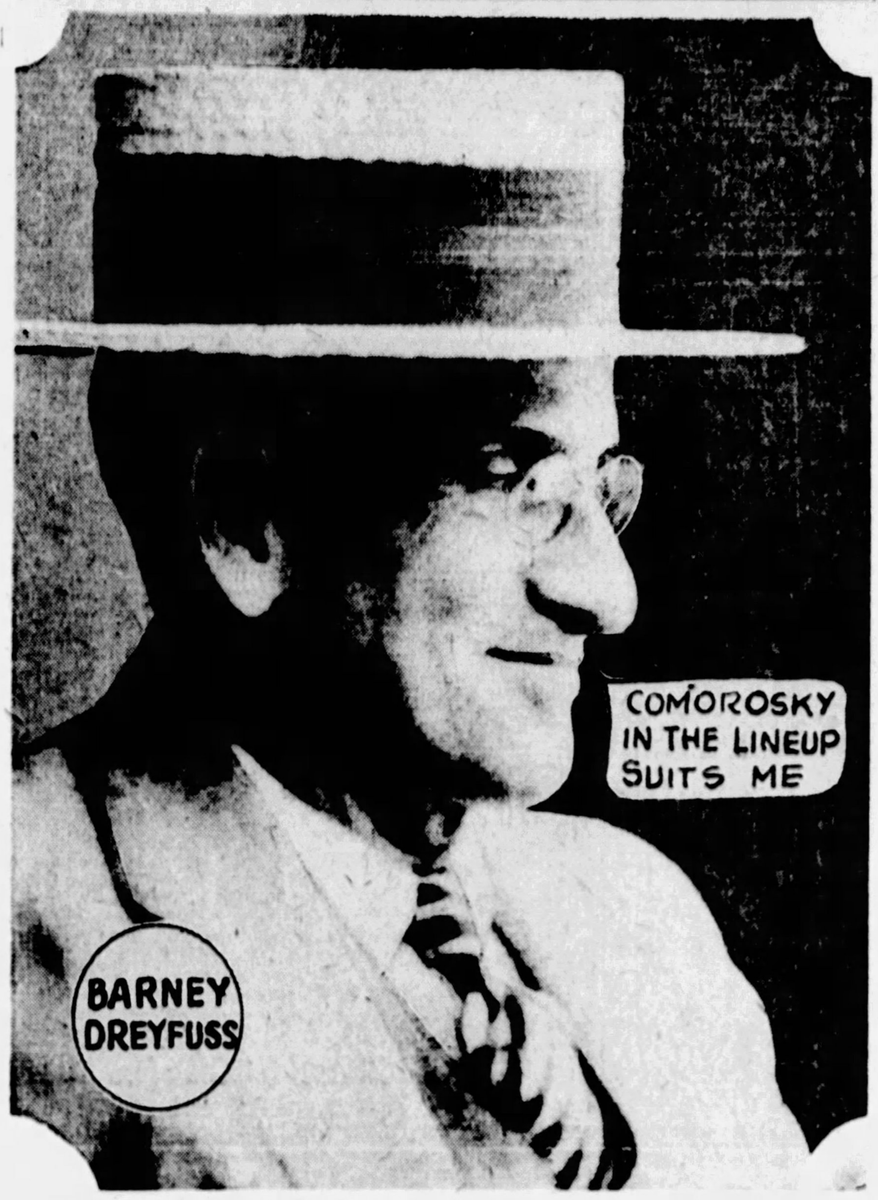
HE'S WELL SATISFIED



WITH CUYLER ON BENCH

At least, that's what the owner of the Pirates said when asked about the insertion of Adam Comorosky in the Pirate lineup to take the place of Kiki Cuyler, who subbed for one day for Lloyd Waner. His comment was that Manager Bush's decision was pleasing to him and in accordance with his wishes. This unposed picture of the local baseball magnate was snapped as he sat in his box at Forbes Field yesterday watching the Corsairs keep their hold of one game on first place by beating the Reds, 5-0.

ONLY TWO VETERANS BACK ON SQUAD

FACING one of the hardest schedules in the history of the school, the Bellevue High School gridders are hard at work under the direction of Coach McGrew. Only three lettermen are back from last year and Coach McGrew must rebuild his team. A squad of 45 men started practice last week.

Bellevue opens its season at Ambridge on September 24. Other games are Dormont, Carnegie, Sewickley, Ben Avon, Coraopolis and Avalon. Coach McGrew is anxious to book a game abroad for October 7 or 8. Write him at Bellevue High School, Bellevue, Pa.

TAUSCHER BACK WITH BUCS

Another young farm hand of the Pittsburgh baseball club who has been in the minors this year for the purpose of getting some needed seasoning came back into the Pirate fold today to finish the 1927 campaign with Donie Bush's pennant chasers.

The latest optioned player to be recalled from the bushes is Walter Tauscher, the big right-hand pitcher. He was obtained last fall from the Williamsport club of the New York-Pennsylvania League and was carried on the spring training trip to Paso Robles last spring, later being sold under option to the Columbia (S. C.) club of the South Atlantic Association.

The management's spring conviction that Tauscher was a pitcher of unusual promise has been borne out by his showing with the Columbia team this year. Though the club is in seventh place, Tauscher has stood out among the pitchers of the "Sally" League. He has won 13 games, against 15 lost—a creditable record with a seventh-place club—and a number of his defeats were suffered by scores of 2 to 1 and 3 to 2. He also won the distinction of being one of the few hurlers of the year to pitch a no-hit, no-run game.

Another high spot in his year's record was the pitching of a 17-inning game, in which he did not allow a run after the fifth inning, pitching 12 successive scoreless innings.

In a total of 250 innings pitched for Columbia, Tauscher gave only 30 bases on balls, an average of only a fraction more than one pass per nine-inning game. Good judges who have watched his work this year consider him just about ripe for the big show.

BOSS DENIES ANTAGONISM

TOWARD BENCH-RIDING CUYLER

Manager Donie Bush of the Pirates, in a talk with newspapermen before yesterday's game, announced that he had just signed a contract to remain as manager of the club next season and said he was straining every point to win the pennant this year. He said Cuyler was being kept out of the regular lineup because other members of the club were playing better ball and denied there was any animosity in his dealings with the player. This picture also is an unposed one and was snapped by a Sun-Telegraph photographer as Manager Bush and Capt. Pie Traynor stood in the dugout watching the players in the field yesterday.

CHAMPION FORCED TO STOP BOXING

LAKE VILLA, Ill., Sept. 7.—(AP.)—A tiny split on Gene Tunney's right eyelid halted the heavyweight champion's training today and threatened to keep him from the practice ring for almost a week. Believing that the cut must be allowed to heal completely, rather than risk further damage close to the date of Gene's return battle with Jack Dempsey, September 22, Manager Billy Gibson called off the boxing program for today and Thursday.

Just when the titleholder will resume boxing will be determined later. In the meantime, Gene will confine his training to shadow boxing and roadwork.

The accident to the titleholder's optic occurred in the third round of a practice muss with Chuck Wiggins yesterday. Because of an engagement Thursday with Tiny Herman in Indiana, Chuck was showing exceptional speed and aggressiveness when he suddenly bumped Tunney's forehead in a clinch. Blood seeped immediately from a wound about an inch long.

CONTINUES WORKOUT

Tunney refused to discontinue work for the day despite the accident. He boxed three rounds with Billy Vidabeck after the go with Wiggins. Billy made no effort to reach the head, centering a weaving, left hook of the type that Dempsey fancies on Gene's body. The champion had trouble reaching his sparmate with the left jabs coming in.

The rain which drenched Tunney's camp for a week before leaving Speculator, N. Y., caught up with the champion last night.

A rousing thunderstorm and brilliant lightning display over Lake Villa entertained the camp until dampness caused a short circuit in the lighting system. Most of the camp members groped their way to their beds in darkness before the lights were restored.

SPURNS HEADGEAR

The blow which cut the gash in Tunney's eyebrow could have done no damage to the average boxing champion in training, because all of them, especially the heavyweights, have adopted the football headgear to prevent just such accidents.

Tunney is unique in refusing to use such a protector and still he shows no marks on nose or ears of his glove profession. It is his theory that the blows of his sparring partners help to toughen the skin of his face and head. Two of his spar mates, Vidabeck and Frank Muskie, wear the headgear, but Wiggins does not.

"If I have to protect myself with a headguard from my sparring partners to keep them from messing me up, then I will quit," Tunney once said. "They are in there trying, too, but if I cannot keep them from in-

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

YOU can't get anything like a definite line on a new ball player in a single game in the big leagues, whether he plays brilliantly or poorly, for it takes a long time to make the test thorough and decisive, but good judges of young baseball timber who watched the work of Outfielder Adam Comorosky, now in the Pirate lineup, while he was with the Wichita (Kan.) club in the Western League, predict that after the local fans have had a chance to see Comorosky in action in a few games they will concur in the opinion that it is going to be no easy matter to keep the recruit from retaining a place on the regular Pirate team.

As in the case of most other young outfielders who come up, one doubtful point about Comorosky is his batting.

Out in the Western League he left nothing to be desired in that department, as he hit close to .400 all season and was one of the leading contenders for the league leadership. But it must be remembered that that was against minor league pitching. What he will be able to do against the major league brand of hurling remains to be seen.

It often happens that a youngster who hits like the well-known fiend in the small leagues is unable to do a thing against the fingers of higher class in the big show. If he has a batting weakness they will find it very speedily and after that his batting average will come down like a spent rocket.

Apart from that one question, which time alone can answer, baseball men who have studied Comorosky declare that he has a very bright future and that in all probability Pittsburgh has picked up another gem.

The lad whom the Pirates bought from Williamsport in the New York-Pennsylvania league last fall and tried out for a short time has apparently improved greatly since he was sent to Wichita for further seasoning. Critics and fans all around that circuit say that he was beyond question the best ball player in the Western league this year.

"CHICK" FRASER, Pirate scout, rarely waxes so enthusiastic over a young player as he does over Comorosky.

"Just wait until you have seen that boy in a few games," said Fraser. "If he only hits he will be a real big leaguer right away, and it will be a mighty hard job for any one to crowd him out of the Pittsburgh lineup.

"His legs recall those of Hans Wagner, but what they may lack in symmetry they make up in speed, and he is just about as fast in the outfield or on the bases as any one I can think of right now. He has a great throwing arm, he can go about as far as the best of them for a fly ball in any direction, he is all that could be desired at fielding ground balls, he has a good baseball head, and in a general sense he is

JACK JOHNSON DEFIES STRIBLING; JAILED

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 7.—(AP.)—Jack Johnson, former heavyweight champion of the world; W. L. Stribling, the "Georgia schoolboy," and Leo Diebel, of Oklahoma, awoke this morning to find themselves behind the cold gray bars of Omaha's city jail.

The three spent the night with police after the Stribling-Diebel bout was stopped by the referee in the sixth round and after Johnson announced to the 5,000 spectators that he could "knock out both Stribling and Diebel in two rounds."

The fight, which was to have lasted 10 rounds, was a slow affair throughout. Neither boxer seemed willing to

Wolgast Pathetic Figure As He Boasts of Prowess On Being Declared Insane

AD WOLGAST.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 7.—(UP.)—Ad Wolgast, 39, who enjoyed a brief but hectic reign as lightweight champion of the world, 17 years ago, has been consigned to an asylum as hopelessly insane.

Alienists at his hearing yesterday said he was suffering from "deterioration of the brain cells."

But to his friends of the pugilistic world, he is "punch drunk." His rise to fame as "king of the little fellows," they said, cost him his sanity.

When Wolgast knocked out Battling Nelson to win the title in 1910, after 40 rounds of hard fighting, it was said of him that he could "take it" as none of them could. Nelson was noted for his ability to stand punishment, but even he succumbed to the greater stamina of Wolgast.

Then Wolgast defended his championship against Joe Rivers and was knocked out. But Rivers fell down first, the referee ruled, and he was counted out while the unconscious Wolgast was held upright by the official.

A pitiful spectacle was presented in court when the former champion's case was called. He stood before the judge and boasted of his prowess and his approaching "comeback."

"I'm all ready for the rest of them, training every day," Wolgast said grinning. "I've done roadwork. That's the only way to train. I'll be champion again in a few weeks."

A few minutes later the order sending him to Patton Institute for the rest of his life was issued.

Wolgast suffered loss of memory in 1920. Since then he had been in care of friends, but recently he became violent and an insanity complaint was made.

SOCCER by TOM BIRNS

HARRY McCLURG, pompers pilot of the Pittsburgh Rovers, was in the other evening. He is doing his best to give the Lawrenceville sector another winner, and should the men that he has in mind sign on the dotted line, he should have a good combination.

A number of the well-known players of the district are looking over the prospective field for a well-paid job on the strength of their soccer playing ability. A number of the managers, however, are going on record by stating that there are no jobs to be had, and if players wish to print their clubs, it will be for the sport's sake.

Well, this is the week of soccer's inaugural, and this time next week we can give the fans an idea of the well-balanced teams in the district. Heidelberg, the national champion, is idle, breaking ground in the league a week from Sunday.

The Scottish Clan League meets this evening to decide how many clubs will make up that old circuit.

The newly formed Central A. A. club will show its wares at Lawrence Park for the first time on Saturday.

Eight games will be staged this week-end, four on Saturday and four on Sunday. The football loop will monopolize the limelight on Saturday with the American outfit starting its season the following day.

Local-Owned Mare Expires In Race At Clarksburg

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Sept. 7.—Marie Flynn, a black mare owned by B. J. The mare won the first heat and finished second in the second.

Through the Sport Lens

By HAVEY J. BOYLE.

"YOU can go to hell," said Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pirates, to the writer yesterday. This was a few seconds after he had entered his office, where fantastically enough, I had gone with other writers at invitation of Donie Bush, Pirate manager, who wanted to announce, primarily he had been signed for another season as manager.

HAVEY BOYLE.

Bush had just finished telling the purpose of the meeting and I had said something inconsequential in return when Mr. Dreyfuss came in to say: "I didn't hear what you said there, but you can go to hell."

It isn't every sport writer who gains the distinction of having a baseball owner tell him where to go.

AT first I was tempted to ask the Pirate owner his conception of hell, as it is a matter that always has interested me, academically only of course, but curiosity is another line overcame the theological strain in me and so I asked him why he would consign me to Beelzebub.

The cat came out of the bag, pretty soon. It appears I have been largely responsible for some club troubles by going out of my way to put the club's position in an unfavorable light and by stroking an oar for the boat of a player.

Now, ordinarily, it is not interesting to hear that someone, possibly for very good reasons, has told me where to go, but I feel certain in this case it is interesting since it affords the public an opportunity to get a delicious whiff of what relations exist sometime between a club owner and a writer. Furthermore, it is so important to me that I could not possibly write about less interesting things with this amazing incident bringing up queer concepts before my eye.

THE chirous part of the affair was that up until the moment Mr. Dreyfuss disclosed his frank sentiment I was under a delusion that he and I were pretty good friends. I explained my surprise to him, although I was careful to give him the right to hold his opinion. I believe, I added, as I was trying to weld my scattering thoughts together in some form to allow for precise articulation that while I thought he was unjustified in this surprising attack I was content with the new kind of compact he had proposed and which was sealed by me.

ALWAYS, he said, in explaining his ill wishes toward me I had been for the player and not the club. He named names, recalling how I had been overly fond of Maranville and only lately had thrown my pounds on the scale in favor of Cuyler. Still, I couldn't remember that I had written a word against Maranville's leaving here, and in the Cuyler affair, while honest in bringing out Cuyler's good points, I tried to recall if I had completely forgotten Bush's or the club's side of the controversy. I was convinced I had tried to be fair. As best I could I made these points, not defensively for I was unwilling to assume that sort of position in an argument which was started by the weaker side.

THE controversy, I am glad to report, was not heated. No voices were raised above conversational tone. In the end I said I was satisfied with the new pact. Perhaps a good word or so that in 10 years I surely must have said about him at one time or another came back to my whilom friend for he said:

"It is not personal. If I said anything to hurt you I am sorry."

SOME may say all this is quite extraneous, that the public cares little about the minor skirmishes between a provincial sport writer and a club owner, but in another light the story of Mr. Dreyfuss' attack is important. It is important because with such a feeling existing, not hidden from the part of the public which reads this column, I might with some skill attack Mr. Dreyfuss under cover of seeking public baseball weal when really I might care little for the baseball weal but rather be venting a personal attack through devious means.

SO that in reporting this at least I am taking off a cloak which might hide a typographical dagger and this gesture possibly, if I

Jones Resigns As Head Grid Coach at Yale

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 7.—(AP.)—T. A. D. Jones, head football coach at Yale since 1920, will retire at the end of the coming season.

A statement by Prof. George H. Nettleton, chairman of the Yale University Athletic Association, revealed the resignation and its acceptance. Jones will devote all his time to his coal business.

No action will be taken toward choosing a successor until the resignation has become effective, it is announced.

After graduation in 1908 from the Sheffield Scientific School, Jones spent one year at Yale as assistant backfield coach and then went to Syracuse for a year as head coach. The next five years he spent coaching football at Fawling School and Exeter, then returned to his alma mater in 1916 as head coach, turning out a "big three" championship team. He did no more coaching until he returned to Yale in 1920 as head coach.

Grid Season May Be Here, But the Weather Isn't

★ SUN-TELEGRAPH ★ SPORTS ★

DAMON RUNYON SAYS

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—That $1 "tops" idea that Dr. Tom McArdle inaugurated at my suggestion over in the Queensboro Club seems to be growing in popularity. It is not unlikely that the ringworms presently will be enjoying all their boxing at about a buck what it cost them.

DAMON RUNYON

The good Signor Humberto Fugazy has followed McArdle's lead over in Ebbets Field, recently producing one of the most exciting shows of the season. He is back again tonight with a presentation in the same spot, at what Mr. Abe Yeager, the nineteenth, calls "popular prices."

The good signor Humberto Fugazy is putting on a card that would have been deemed a bargain at his "tops" a few months ago. It is topped by Stanislaus Loayza, the Chilean lightweight, and Bruce Flowers, the pride of Harlem, a dark-skinned young man who seems to be willing to fight anybody, anywhere, any time.

THIS is a most commendable spirit, especially in the lightweight division. Incidentally, it gives Bruce Flowers plenty of work. He is rarely idle. Behind Loayza and Flowers, the good Signor Humberto Fugazy is presenting Tommy Cello, called the best lightweight on the Pacific Coast, against Pal Moran, the New Orleans veteran.

It may be that Signor Fugazy is endeavoring to clear up the lightweight situation generally. He has Sid Terris, the acknowledged king of the division, rematched with Phil McGraw of Detroit for a later date. Perhaps Signor Fugazy hopes to eventually inveigle Sammy Mandell, claimant of the lightweight title, into meeting one of his popular price performers.

ALSO on the same card is Roberto Roberti, the lengthy gent from Italy, who seems to be the current hope of the Italians for heavyweight prestige. He is meeting Lew Barba, which is a fair test for Roberto. So far the tall Italian has performed very well. True, he has met no particularly dangerous opponents, but the good Signor Fugazy tells me that if Roberto gets by Barba he will hereafter be matched only against the best men in the division.

Roberti had considerable experience in Italy before coming to America. He knocked out most of his opponents there. He has knocked out every opponent he has met in America to date. He seems to be a very good puncher, and he certainly has more ring presence than any fighter now before the pugilistic public.

HE takes a bow like a grand opera singer. The New York Italians are much excited over Roberti, and follow him in droves after a battle. If he can really fight up to his promise, he will be one of the greatest drawing cards since Senor Luis Angel Firpo, the Wild Bull of the Pampas.

A six-rounder between Eddie Whalen, welterweight champion of the National Guard, and Nick Palmer of South Brooklyn, is another feature. Then there will be two four-rounders between Ramon Castillo of Cuba and Sam White of Brooklyn, and Joe Oliver of Sheepshead Bay and Jimmy Roberts of South Brooklyn.

I TAKE special note of this show for a special reason.

I was one of the first to campaign for low prices for the ringworms. And it seems to be only fair to encourage a promoter who is willing to fall in line with my suggestion.

The card probably will draw a big crowd and, although the financial return will not be enormous, the promoter will probably make a reasonable profit. This everybody ought to be satisfied, including the campaigners for the reduced scale.

BUT I would here warn the good Signor Humberto Fugazy and other promoters of a dangerous condition that threatens their low-priced shows. I have had several complaints from ringworms that when they got to the pugilistic premises, especially the night Sid Terris and Phil McGraw met, they found no tickets in the hands of speculators.

The ringworm has lost as much sound for complaint against those 5 tickets being doubled on him as a fellow who is asked return-mate rates for the expensive shows—perhaps more so. I hope and trust, as Dr. Joe Humphreys says, that the promoter will do their best to keep a ducats out of the hands of the speculators.

DEMPSEY LOAFS AGAIN

LINCOLN PIELDS CHUTE, Ill., Sept. 7.—(AP.)—Fresh and chipper Jack Dempsey had another day of loafing on his hands today, with roadwork and golf the only tasks assigned by Manager Leo Flynn. He has only six pounds to shed in two weeks, and as his workouts with the mitts are eliminated, two days of work and two days of golf.

Flynn has first dibs on Dempsey's time even granting him a night off in town, but last night Jack remained at the farm track to be ready for his four-mile jaunt before breakfast.

Asked if he had read about Gene Tunney's impressive boxing in his first workouts at Lake Villa, Dempsey said he had no time to read the papers.

Aces Survive First Round

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

THE more famous of Pa Pitt's public links stars, almost without exception, successfully survived the first round of match play in the annual city golf championship tournament at the Schenley Park links today. Among the present celebrities who advanced were Carl F. Kauffmann, national public links champion, who defeated H. T. Mason, 8 and 7; Pat McDonough, defending champion, who accounted for P. J. Dunn, 2 up, and Robert Graham, medalist, who put out Dick Wessels, a strong title contender, 2 up.

One celebrity in another walk of life who fell a first round victim was Tom Davies, former Pitt gridiron great and present coach at the University of Rochester. Davies played very creditably, but was beaten out on the home green by Joseph Natalie, 1 up.

The closest approach to a surprise or "upset" was the 2 up victory of S. Lally over Bernie McFarland, a former city champion. Wessels and Dunn are other losers who are rich in accomplished performers that they can stand a lot of beating.

The summary of first-round matches in the championship flight:

Tom Barr defeated J. P. Quinlan, 4 and 2; J. S. Lally defeated Bernie McFarland, 2 up; Robert Graham defeated Richard Wessels, 2 up; M. Gallo defeated H. T. Wilhelm, 2 and 1; Carl F. Kauffmann defeated H. T. Mason, 8 and 7; Pat McDonough defeated P. J. Dunn, 2 up; R. B. McClelland defeated R. C. Barr, 3 and 2; Joseph Natalie defeated Tom Davies, 1 up.

The summary of matches in other flights:

SECOND FLIGHT

Dr. James Blair defeated H. N. McHenry, 5 and 3; Dr. P. M. Lloyd defeated A. W. Reed, 2 and 1; H. Stevenson defeated S. H. McBride, 2 and 1; M. Lipschick defeated W. Pickles, 5 and 4; M. M. Dunn defeated Frank Schwartz, 2 and 1; W. J. Ward defeated P. N. Sellers, 4 and 3; C. J. Landon defeated G. A. Ewer by default; W. N. Pratt defeated J. S. Mason, 2 and 1.

SIDNEY LEAVES US

Sidney Salomon Jr., junior pride of the Westmoreland Country Club, left us last night for good—or, at least, almost for good. The youngster was headed for the Culver Military Academy, and he anticipates playing on the school's golf team just as soon as he gets there. And when he gets leave of absence for a little vacation during a holiday period or whatnot, Sidney won't be coming home to Pittsburgh—it will be St. Louis, for his family, so he says, is headed in that direction. We hope Sidney makes good.

100 ELLWOOD CITY HIGH GRIDDERS ANSWER CALL

ELLWOOD CITY, Pa., Sept. 7.—One hundred candidates for this year's local high school football team turned out on the first call of Coach H. Martin (Duke) Lay at the high school last evening. Indications are that while this year's squad will be lighter than the championship team of two years ago the coaches will have plenty of fast, light material to work with. Suits and other equipment for the team arrived sometime ago. The season starts on September 23 when New Wilmington will clash with the home.

ever get on my high horse to gallop threateningly around Mr. Dreyfuss, may bring about a discount that will be fair to the Pirate owner.

IN this connection the mood is on me to repeat what I often have said before that he is a great baseball man. He has provided excellent baseball here over a long stretch and has been a great factor in raising the game to its present high estate nationally. I am not kissing the hand raised against me, in this, but I simply want to point out that the man's manners must not be confused with his baseball sense.

Basically, was I wrong or right? Unfortunately, that will never be settled definitely. I believe the red flag which Mr. Dreyfuss saw, the flag which incited him to the attack, came in the form of a very casual sentence that I thought Cuyler had little chance to stay after this year because once he held out. That may have been entirely false. It was only my opinion. But conceding that I was wrong—certainly my column would have been open for a direct denial.

IF men are wished into hell on pretexts so slight as this one, I can't see why Satan ever leaves his red hearth. The daily influx under such conditions should satisfy even such a glutton as Satan and all his crimson imps.

take the offensive and Referee Jimmy Drexel warned them three times not to stall. Finally, in the sixth round, he stopped the fight, announcing that it was "no contest." When he had finished, Johnson, who was in Dreel's corner, issued his challenge to the two fighters.

Before Johnson could say any more and before the crowd could realize what had happened, police arrested the three men and took them to the police station, where they were booked for "investigation" and held without bond for a hearing today.

Stribling said he hurt his hand in the second round and that this bothered him during the rest of the fight. Dr. Frank Lovely, police surgeon, said, however, that the hand was only slightly bruised.

State Boxing Commissioner Ira Vorhees said that the State Boxing Commission would hold an investigation Friday. Until then, the $2,000 claimed by the boxers will be held.

Both Stribling and Dreel said they could not see why the fight was stopped and that they were doing their best.

Pa Stribling, manager for Young Stribling, said he knew he shouldn't come to Omaha, as it was a "tough spot for fights" and that he had turned down previous offers.

CASE IS CONTINUED

Police Magistrate Dineen today continued the cases of the three until tomorrow morning. Stribling and Dreel were charged with staging a "fake" or "framed" fight, while Johnson was charged with complicity in it. Bond was fixed at $500.

Pa Stribling worked ceaselessly trying to round up the necessary cash bonds for his son, while friends of Dreel and Johnson did the same.

The continuance was granted upon the request of A. V. Shotwell, attorney for Stribling. He asked for a week, but Magistrate Dineen allowed only a day.

TAD'S TIDBITS

THERE is a great deal in what a man thinks. If you think you are going far, you will go far. If you don't think so, you won't. Occasionally men go far unexpectedly. In the ring it is the same as anywhere else. Confidence is as necessary as ability.

Fighters who believe themselves unbeatable are hard gents to convince otherwise. Bat Nelson thought he was the world's great lightweight, and he was for a long time.

Jim Jeffries told this writer that when he was in shape he didn't think there was a man alive who could beat him. He was right for a long time.

Gene Tunney while training for Dempsey stated time after time that he would become champion, and he did.

Managers of fighters tell their men that they are the sweet papas of their class. They lull their men to death. It helps the fighter absorb the hard knocks.

Dan Morgan made K. O. Brown believe that no one could knock him out and Brown went far.

Jimmy Johnston bulled Mike McTigue into thinking himself a great puncher, and look what Mike did.

Charley Harvey talked his English fighters silly about their boxing, and they believed it.

Joe Humphreys once had Sailor Burke believing himself a champ, and Joe made money with him.

Leo Flynn, past master of the bull, has Dempsey thinking himself the greatest man that ever pulled on a glove, and Jack is feeling great.

Recently, out West, Jack talked with Jack James, and this is what he said:

"When I started out fighting, they were always trying to get me licked around a gymnasium in Salt Lake. I didn't think I could be licked, and so I was pretty tough to whip.

"Same way when I commenced getting good in the fight game. I made up my mind I was going to be champion of the world some day, and I WAS!

"Right now I think I'm good enough to win back the title I lost last year. And I'm GOING TO!

"Your mind controls your muscles in the ring. You've got to be able to think to land your punches right. Same way out of the ring. If you THINK you can do a thing, you CAN! That's the way I feel about it, anyhow!"

THE REAL "ONE-EYED" CONNELLY WAS A STAR.

WE HAVE with us nowadays a bootleg edition of "One-Eyed" Connelly, the gate crasher. The original with that moniker died years ago, but was a big-timer in his line. Thirty years ago he gave the fans many a laugh, and never missed a big fight. The Connelly of today has the gall of a burglar, but lacks the humor of the original one-glimmed gent.

Dempsey Really Thinks He Will Beat Tunney

Tom O'Rourke, who knew the original "One-Eyed" Connelly well, knows a number of stories about him. Here's two that Tom told us the other day:

It was on John L. Sullivan's train to Carson City upon the occasion of the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight that "OneEyed" Connelly had a hot time. By fine nerve he had succeeded in working some big railroad man for a pass from Virvinia City to Carson. Jack McAuliffe, ex-lightweight champion, was on the train, and had with him Harry Peppers, a colored fighter, who had no ticket between those points. When the train pulled out of Virginia City McAuliffe said to Connelly:

"How did you get a ticket?"

"On me nerve, o' course," was the reply.

"Let's see it," commanded Jack, and Connelly handed it over. McAuliffe gave the ticket to Peppers and "One-Eyed" was in a stew. He pleaded with the two fighters in vain. When the conductor came along Connelly tried to explain, but it wouldn't work. The train was stopped and Connelly was hurled into a snowdrift. He was 25 miles from Carson City then, but it was not too far for "One-Eyed" to tramp it. He got to the ringside just in time to see the men put up their hands. The beauty of this achievement was that "One-Eyed" succeeded in beating his way past Dan Stuart, a terror to dead-heads, who ran the fight, and who charged admission to newspapers and telegraph companies. The moment Stuart saw Connelly in line he said: "Connelly, you'll have to pay."

"I've got a tip, Dan," was the ready response. "I don't want to get in, but as you've been me friend, I come tel tell yer dere's goin' to be trouble. Two of the dead shots here is sore, 'cause you ain't let 'em in. I heard 'em say dey was going ter shoot yer block off. Now, Dan, I'll stan' 'ere and when I sees 'em comin' I'll holler and you can duck quick. Eh?"

"Go in," said Stuart wearily. "Go in, it's no use talking. Go in."

It was in Chicago later that Parson Davies ran a big show. Connelly was turned down at the doors and was wild with rage. The police threw him around until his clothes were torn from his back and he was bleeding from the nose. Davies was deaf to all entreaties, and finally got into the ring to introduce the boxers.

"Gentlemen," began the Parson smoothly, "I take great pleasure—" Crash! A paving stone came through the skylight and struck the floor in front of Davies.

"It is 'One-Eyed' Connelly's card," said he. "Tell him to come in." And then he made a hurried exit from the ring.

Connelly was soon at the ringside, a little the worse for wear, but contented in the thought that he had carried his point. It was an old saying that Connelly never missed a championship battle, no matter where it was held in this country.

SPORT COMMENT

the sweetest prospect I have seen in a long time.

"Comorosky looks like a real hitter, too, and generally drives the ball on a line, though the real test of course, will not come until he has faced big league pitching for some time."

FRANK MORAN, the retired Pittsburgh heavyweight, who returned to this city last week after adding to his extensive travels another tour over about half of the globe, probably will be seen in a new role when he next appears before a local boxing crowd.

There is a strong possibility that he will serve as referee at the opening boxing show of the local indoor season, which, if Pittsburgh wins the National League pennant, will be held at Motor Square Garden on the night of the day of the first game in the world series, probably about Wednesday, October 5.

Moran's friends are urging him to consider acting as referee at the show, and though the state boxing commission has not yet been approached on the subject it is generally believed among boxing fans that the commissioners would gladly consent to give Frank a license and appoint him to handle the first show here.

There is no doubt that Moran's appearance as referee would be a big added attraction.

IT is also certain that if Moran cared to take up refereeing regularly he would make one of the best officials of the kind in the country, as he has kept himself in such shape that he can still move around as fast as the best of them, is as smart as any one in the game, is far above the average fighter in education and intellectuality, and has the size and strength to handle boxers of any class.

Back of it all is a world of experience acquired in a ring career extending from 1910 to 1927, during which period he met practically every heavyweight of his time, including Jess Willard when the latter was champion, Jack Johnson when the Negro held the title, Fred Fulton, Luther McCarty, Al Palzer, Gunboat Smith, Jack Dillon, Jim Coffey, Carl Morris, Al Kubiak, Tony Ross, Tom Cowler, Bombardier Wells, Bob Martin, Joe Beckett, Bob Roper, Tom Kennedy and many others.

It wasn't Moran's fault that he did not meet Jack Dempsey, in addition, as he was the first to fire a challenge at the latter when Dempsey won the title from Willard in 1919.

It can never be said that Frank dodged any of them while he was in his prime.

BOB WADDELL, assistant football coach at Carnegie Tech, is one of the gridiron men hereabouts who supports Hugo Bezdek and others in the proposed movement to have the goal posts removed from the playing field.

"I'd be in favor of that," said Bob in discussing the radical change suggested. "After all, the gaining of ground, the making of first downs and the scoring of touchdowns by a team is the real objective in football.

"Team play should be paramount in a contest that is intended to determine which is the strongest eleven, whereas the booting of field goals and the kicking of goal for the extra point after touchdown is merely a one-man play, which often causes the defeat of the stronger eleven.

"I think it would be a good plan to take away the goal posts and let the teams fight it out between the goal lines."

TITLE GAME TONIGHT

Tunney and Tommy Crotti will clash at Washington Park tonight to determine the baseball championship of the Carnegie Steel League. Both teams are tied for the lead and tonight's game will decide the championship.

FOUR DIE AS CLIENT PULLS GUN IN LAW DISPUTE

ROW OVER $500 LEADS MAN TO SLAY

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—"When the real story comes out, I'll be admired by everybody for what I did in protection of my family."

This was all Charles Bernstein, 53, proprietor of a women's apparel shop in Baltimore, Md., would say today as he was locked up at police headquarters on a murder charge after having "shot up" a New York City law office, with the resultant death of four persons and injuries to another.

From other sources, the police were informed that the shooting was the result of a petty real estate transaction involving only a few hundred dollars. Bernstein acted under the belief he was tricked in the deal, it was said.

The shooting occurred in the law offices of Bijur, Herts & Steinberg.

The dead:

Charles Herkovitz, 38, a real estate broker.

Victor J. Steinberg, 39, a member of the law firm, and Bernstein's attorney.

Henry C. Cohen, 40, lawyer.

Robert McGrority, 29, a stage manager.

John Steinloff, 19, a postoffice clerk, was injured.

Four men, including Bernstein, met in the ninth floor office to discuss a real estate dispute involving $50. Bernstein had come from Baltimore to sit in at the conference. He sat at a table around which Herkovitz, Cohen and Steinberg were grouped.

After a few minutes discussion, voices were raised, and then came revolver shots.

Miss Sara Blum, a stenographer, saw Steinberg run to the window, teeter on the ledge, and then plunge into space.

Herkovitz ran into the hallway, with Bernstein, smoking gun in hand, after him. Bernstein, the police were told, sent a bullet into the fleeing Herkovitz's back.

Then Bernstein turned, shot Cohen three times and fled.

Steinberg's body was found in the street. Before it hit the pavement, it struck McGrority, the stage manager, and caromed off Steinloff, another pedestrian. McGrority died of a broken back.

Steinloff suffered shock and bruises but refused medical aid.

It is not known whether Steinberg jumped in a panic to escape the bullets or whether he was pushed over the ledge.

'ROUND-THE-WORLD FLIERS -:- IDOLIZED IN ENGLAND

SWINGING THE PROP

Edward F. Schlee, owner of "Pride of Detroit," 'round-the-world plane, "kicking over" his motor by swinging the prop at Croydon Field, England, where the ship landed after its transatlantic flight from Newfoundland, the first hop.

THE ARRIVAL

Crowds assembled at the field, expectant of the arrival of the "Pride of Detroit," piloted on its long trip by William S. Brock broke the police lines and rushed for the plane as it taxied across the grass. Photo shws the plane as it rolled to a stop.

WORSHIPPED

The English crowd, pleased at the first landing of a transatlantic plane on English soil, idolized the two fliers. The crowd, swarming around the plane, seized both Schlee and Brock and carried them about the field in a spirited demonstration.

Made Handles For Cans Now Heads Company

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—(AP.)—It took him 45 years to make the grade, but today Charles G. Black, who entered the employ of the Standard Oil Company at the age of 14 and whose first job was making wire handles for cans, was president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, a recently formed $200,000,000 operating subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company (New Jersey).

Announcement of Black's promotion was made yesterday, in connection with the revamping of the Standard Oil Company (New Jersey). Two large operating subsidiaries have now been formed, and a third is considered likely. One of the new subsidiaries will handle the company's marine business; the other will control domestic affairs.

Black was born in Cleveland in 1868. During the summer of 1882 he took a job with the Standard Oil Company, cutting and bending wire for handles for cans. He returned to school in the fall, but the next year became a permanent employe.

SIGNED NOTE AS HUBBY; FINED

Posing as the husband of Dorothy Donahue cost William Blake, 26, of 821 Braun street, $25. Dorothy, separated from her husband, obtained $50 from a loan company and Blake signed the note as Frank Donahue, 909 James street, Wilkinsburg. The real husband denied part in the transaction. In Magistrate George H. England's court, restitution was made and Blake was fined.

ARGUMENTS END IN WOODSIDE OUSTER SUIT

A question by Judge Ambrose B. Reid whether primary election ballots have been printed, today terminated arguments on the eligibility of Robert G. Woodside to run for county controller on the Republican ticket at the primaries September 20.

Judge Reid called to the bench County Commissioner E. V. Babcock, a spectator, and asked concerning the printing of the ballots. Babcock told the court the ballots were ready for distribution to the different polling places.

Later Babcock amplified his statement, asserting that to reprint ballots in event Woodside's name was ruled out, might prove impossible before the primary election.

Attorney George E. Alter, representing the Republican organization, which is backing Woodside's candidacy against that of Controller C. C. McGovern, asked the court to dismiss the petition to prevent Woodside's name appearing on the ballots, on the ground that Common Pleas Court had no jurisdiction. The court took no action on this request.

Attorney Alter cited numerous decisions which he said upheld Woodside's right to be a candidate.

Attorney Frank C. McGirr argued that under the law Woodside is ineligible because he is prohibited from taking office as county controller within two years after expiration of his term as sheriff. The two year limit expires January 4, 1928.

Judge Reid asked for briefs.

Marsh, secretary of the committee, said today. Under the proposed rerouting plan, a number of lines will be operated over Grant street, over which there has been much difference of opinion.

STOCKS SOAR TO RECORD PEAKS

NEW YORK, Sept. 7—(AP)—The stock market today gave another impressive demonstration of strength. The average of 20 leading industrial shares was lifted to a new record high while the average of 20 leading rails was elevated to around the highest level since the war, with about 50 individual issues breaking through to new high levels for the year, or longer.

A wave of selling for both accounts swept through the market at midday, but offerings were well absorbed, and the market quickly headed upward again under the leadership of the motors and specialties. The week's steel trade reviews reported little change in that industry, although the Iron Age composite price for pig iron has dropped to within 2 cents of the lowest level since 1916.

Gains in the industrial list ran from one to six points in the active leaders although a few stocks recorded even larger advances. Several strong spots developed in the oil, textile, leather, public utility and copper shares.

Expectations of a further increase in freight traffic this month attracted new buying into the railroad shares, which moved upward under the leadership of New York Central.

Banks called about $5,000,000 in loans during the morning, but call money continued in plentiful supply at the renewal basis of 3½ per cent.

PITTSBURGH COAL HIGHER ON LOCAL EXCHANGE

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—(AP.)—Trading on the curb exchange today was of the same vigorous character that has prevailed for so long a time. Buying orders came into many high priced industrials, causing advances of 5 to 20 points in that class of stocks, but so far many of these violent upward movements have not been explained by anything in the way of new developments or changed conditions in the affairs of the various companies. In many issues these movements are purely stock market ineffects, due in some instances to the fact that money conditions are effective in reducing the supply of various issues to a minimum.

Royal Baking Powder had one of its widest movements, advancing 24 points to 339. This high mark was followed by reference to some new developments, but those prominent in the company who should be informed about the situation, insisted that nothing special had occurred or was in prospect on which the persistent buying over the past few months could be based.

A different situation prevailed in Curtis Publishing which made a new high record on an advance of 5 points to 202, which could be regarded observers said, as the natural result of earnings and increased asset value of the property represented by the stock. New York Central new stock moved up about a point, making a new high record at 160½. Cehanese first preferred made a further advance of over 5 points and the common stock rose 2 points.

An important feature was the weakness in Lackawanna securities which dropped 3 points to 62 and about 6 points below the early level Tuesday.

High records were made again in a number of the utilities, including American Gas and Electric, Buffalo, Niagara and Eastern and United Gas Improvement, but the last named stock reacted from its high level.

There was initial trading in Piggly Wiggly Western States "A" at 75¾ and 78 and Fire Association of Philadelphia at 61¼ to 61⅝.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—(AP.)—Following is the official list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds (except rights) dealt in, sales unknown in bond list:

THE PRODUCE MARKET

Fruits and vegetables were in fairly active demand at the local wholesale produce district today. Vegetables were sold at about unchanged prices. The fruit market was generally active, with no change in the quotations.

The poultry market was easy and supplies were plentiful. Several changes in the prices of poultry were made. Live Leghorn hens and broilers were lower in price.

The butter, egg and cheese markets were firm. A slight rise was made in longhorns and brick cheese. All eggs were increased 1 cent.

The carlot supplies continued heavy, a total of 76 cars being on track. Included in the arrivals were 1 car of apples, 4 cars bugs, 16 cantaloupes, 2 cauliflower, 44 potatoes, 1 celery, 2 onions, 2 cabbage, 9 peaches, 10 pears, 7 potatoes, 1 sweet potatoes and 2 watermelons.

Clerk Trades $19.90 For Dime, Satisfied —Until He Thinks

HARRISBURG, Sept. 7.—(AP.)—The charge of getting change for a twenty dollar bill and then getting the twenty back with the change has been placed against Dominick McKinnie and Charles Schroyer of Shamokin and Edward Edwards of Mount Carmel. They are being held in the Dauphin County Jail for a hearing before Justice of the Peace Barrett of Elizabethville, Friday morning.

The trio is alleged to have entered an Elizabethville store, made a 10-cent purchase, tendered a $20 bill in payment and then as soon as change was received they produced a dime with the request that the $20 be returned. Soon afterwards the clerk realized what had happened and police arrested the men in Lykens.

Lottery shops in Italy are as plentiful as tobacco shops, and in Austria each tobacco shop, all part of the government monopoly, is also a lottery shop. Besides there are special places where lotteries are marketed, and their advertising is intense.

CHICAGO—After opening headquarters here today, Dr. Vernon Cooley, organizer of Chicago's Anti-Alimony Club, declared that the movement will soon become national in scope. A group of Baltimore husbands have petitioned for a charter. Thousands of telegrams of congratulation are pouring in on Doctor Cooley.

Adam Scoffaw's Journal

Early up, and finde Mister Bob Wagner, the scrivener, a knocking at my casement, and he hath walked an two miles up the road to tell me how, on breaking of his spirit level, while laying up a mud sill, he did get on hands and knees and with his naked eye cast the level by the bosom of the ocean, and he come to borrow my magick spirit level to see if the ocean is, in truth, level. But, Lord! I did finde all the spirits drained from my level (for what purpose I know not, albeit Neighbor Gayton borrow it last) so we did sit and make chin-musique past twelve of the clock.

AUNT RUTH IS ILL, IF ANYBODY CARES

Another Snaffle in Review of "Maurine," Bitter-Sweet Narrative.

Hugh Saxon, who will direct the film version of "Maurine."

Let us wet our thumbs and pass hastily over the next few pages. They are sodden with tearful mumblings of Maurine and her lost cause. Helen was to be married New Year's Day and kept goading Maurine by asking her to be bridesmaid. Maurine declined prettily, saying she was going on an excursion trip to try to forget Vivian Dangerfield and his electric ways with women.

"The house that rang so late with laugh and jest
Grew ghostly with low-whispered sounds; and when
The day arrived Maurine had thought to be Bounding upon the billows of the sea."

What is worse, Aunt Ruth took down with the ague and Maurine—

"Through all the anxious weeks watched beside
*The sufferer's couch. Boy was her help and stay;
Others were kind, but he alone each day
†Brought strength and comfort by his cheerful face.
November passed; and Winter, crisp and chill,
In robes of ermine walked on plain and hill,
Then came one morning in the Eastern mail
A little white-winged birdling of a letter—

Tomorrow, without the aid of confederates, we will absolutely reveal the contents of the letter. Come early and bring your lunch.

BUGS BAER Says

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER.

TEX RICKARD, secretary of war for Chicago, is well pleased with his expensive propaganda.

Tex has no navy. But gosh, what an army.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

There are only two birds in the Rickard army. But both of them are generals.

General Tunney, of the famous Marines who are first to box, has just issued his communique. He states:

"I hate to fight. But I love to spar. There is nothing more beautiful and ethical than doing a swan dance with your shadow at noon."

General Dempsey retorts in perfect Hague manner:

"I'll make that turkey fight when he gets in the ring."

But Tunney prefers to box at noon with his shadow. Then shadows are brilliant silhouettes and not too long. There is something sinister in a tall shadow at twilight when every ant thinks he is a camel.

The Secretary of War for Chicago doesn't care whether they box or fight.

Two men climbing through the ropes to take Tex's dough are not so important as two saps struggling through a turnstile to hand Tex forty dollars each.

The spectators who kick in the three million gate do not care to see Tunney box.

They desire to see Dempsey fight and hope that Tunney gets into the spirit of the occasion. A hit-and-run campaign is not so exciting as a put-and-take contest between a couple of perturbed leopards.

The crowd wants to see a one-ring circus with a fleet of knuckles hanging up records for non-stop flights.

Just because Tunney is best man at this wedding of science and brute strength is no reason why he can wear white gloves.

If the fans see a sofa in a corner of the ring it may be that the boys will sit down and talk it over.

The classical school of sparring is not popular with the mob. If we had our choice of watching a butterfly tapping a rose or lamping a dean emerging from a college we would choose a general jail delivery.

There is something exciting about the clash of two heavy leather financiers provided that the boys remember they are getting paid for slugging and not clinching.

Going to be tough if the referee has to think up new parlor games for the boys before each round.

"You Said It, Marceline!"

By MARCELINE d'ALROY

ON "THE STEPPING-STONE TO LOVE."

PLATONIC friendship is Like a TONIC, It is FINE if a girl
BELIEVES in it,
But if she is in LOVE with the man,
Then it is a BITTER
PILL to swallow.
Platonic FRIENDSHIP, though,
Is often a stepping
Stone to BETTER things, And Between the banks of CASUAL acquaintance and MUTUAL adoration is A pleasant RESTING PLACE.
Some people MANAGE to REST there forever, But
This is not considered
NATURAL, The mere Fact there is DANGER is Supposed to make them
WANT to FALL IN,
And if NEITHER slips,
It is usually that
ONE, or both, is Hanging on to some UNSEEN
HAND, Its owner may be ALIVE, dead, or a dream.
But WITHOUT this force,
P. F. is likely to be a FARCE.

Face That Launched 1000 Ships

Different From This, Probably. Men's Tastes Change.

SHE WILL PLAY HELEN OF TROY.

Helen of Troy is the lady for whom the Greeks and the Trojans fought so long. Homer tells you about it, with all the deeds of Achilles, Hector and the other heroes.

The ancients were taught, and generations of students that have learned their Greek reading Homer have been taught, that Helen was the most beautiful of all women.

History tells us that after the Greeks and the Trojans stopped fighting about her she went back peacefully to her husband. Modern history takes a somewhat different view.

A great poet, Marlowe, wrote of Helen's face as "The face that launched a thousand ships, and burnt the topless towers of Ilium."

The picture you see here is that of a young Hungarian woman, Maria Corda, said to be one of the most beautiful women in Europe.

She will play in the moving picture called "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," taken from a book that has been widely read.

This face of the young Hungarian is a beautiful face, and the men of today might fight over it, if they are foolish enough to do so.

But it is probably not at all like the face that "launched a thousand ships," in the ancient days when Homer wrote how Achilles "sulked in his tent" and thus supplied a favorite quotation for a million American politicians.

Helen of Troy was probably very different from this Helen of Hungary. In the old days they ate strong meat, and probably admired strong women. The original Helen probably could have picked this frail girl up with one hand.

If Homer wrote the truth, those ancient Greek and Trojan fighters had a fighting power that would worry the best of us in these days.

However, you never can tell, it may have been Homer's imagination, not the Greeks and the Trojans that were so strong.

Young men and women are invited to read for themselves the words quoted above about the face that launched a thousand ships. They are supposed to be among the best chosen and most beautifully used words in all literature.

Can you tell why? If you can, you really appreciate the force and beauty of those few words, you may hope to do some good writing yourself some day.

Exercising Right To Vote Real Test of Citizenship

Tomorrow will be the first day for citizens to register as voters who will decide the result of the primary election, September 20. Other registration days are September 13 and September 17. Note that the first sentence of this article implies a distinction between CITIZENS and VOTERS.

Citizenship carries with it the RIGHT to vote. In this country, where opportunity is so great for the material advancement of every person, regardless of his place of birth or his status with relation to allegiance to our government, the right to vote is the vital difference between a citizen and a non-citizen.

Our forefathers fought and shed their blood to give us the right of citizenship, and every American, when it comes to boasting, glories in that right—and often fails to EXERCISE it. It is not a matter of partisan politics, but a question of TRUE Americanism.

This is a country devoted to the principle that the MAJORITY MUST RULE. When citizens neglect to vote a MINORITY MAY RULE. Those who fail carelessly to exercise their right of citizenship have no reason to COMPLAIN if they do not get the kind of rule they desire.

Forehanded citizens will register tomorrow. If that is not possible they will do so on one of the two remaining days. In this the better rule to follow is DO IT NOW.

Don't Worry About It

Little Danger of Infantile Paralysis Here.

Pittsburgh health officials say there is little to be feared about the possibility of an epidemic of infantile paralysis here. Concern about this dread malady, if there has been any, should be quieted by the assurance given.

Worry cannot aid in combating trouble. FORETHOUGHT, which is indicated in the statement of the Health Department, can keep trouble from coming, or LESSEN the weight of its blow if it does come.

We are told that Pittsburgh has been exceptionally free from infantile paralysis for a YEAR. It is much better to think of that than to fret, especially when there is no occasion for being especially anxious.

Although the disease has made some headway elsewhere, that should not be regarded as an indication Pittsburgh will be similarly stricken. The reopening of schools is held to be an AID in keeping watch on the situation. And our medical men WILL watch, you may be assured.

Trip Good for All

It is good news that the whole of America will get to see and welcome Capt. Rene Fonck, gallant French ace of the World War. And that Capt. Fonck will get to see the whole of America.

The ace has temporarily abandoned his long cherished plan to fly from New York to Paris, thwarted by a lamentable accident at Roosevelt Field last year. Now he plans to make an aerial tour of the United States before hopping the Atlantic.

Perhaps after he has "Seen America First" he won't want to fly back to France at all!

THE TRAILER

Garrett P Serviss Says:

Man and Nature

IS MAN superior to nature? There is a strong tendency in biology to treat him as a mere cog in the material machine called the world or the universe. Not only is it assumed that life is purely a material phenomenom, difficult to imitate only because we have not yet learned the trick of its physical and chemical technique, but also that the "soul" or "spirit" is mythical, a simple illusion that vanishes with the death of the body.

This is such a tremendous blow against the religious faith of many millions of worthy people that the mere name of biology is to some of them a thing accursed, as a generation ago was the name of Voltaire.

But by no means all biologists, and still less all scientists in general are ready to throw the soul into the waste basket that stands handily beside the working desk of every theorizer in science. Mingled with the miscellanea in that basket lies the atomic theory of our school days, which we were taught by great researchers and thinkers to venerate as the sure basis of modern physics. But while theory after theory fails, the butterfly of the human soul still keeps its wings free from the far-flung nets of hypothesis.

Its faithful defenders may find some consolation in a recent utterance of Dr. Paul Heyl, of the United States Bureau of Standards—an institution that suggests certain knowledge and absence of guesswork, if anything human can.

"Life," says he, "has reached such a degree of development that a new set of phenomena is beginning to make appearance, something different in kind from anything that has been before; as different in its turn as was life itself compared to inanimate matter; something superimposed upon life as life of old was superimposed upon the non-living. And it is appropriately enough, in man, the highest type of life, the flower of creation, and the 'heir of all the ages,' that this new thing first makes itself manifest—a moral sense, an ethical feeling, which often finds itself as much a stranger in its environment as life must have felt among the crystals and colloids in which it began its existence. If we must find a single word to express the new quality, let us call it Soul."

But the opponents of evolution will find no comfort, as the next following statement shows:

"What is this new thing which nature has brought forth and with the development of which we have been entrusted? No man can say, but it is a fair inference that it will go far. Life has gone far from a tiny speck of protoplasm; who knows to what length this new thing, this mind, this soul if you will, may carry us? But with all that we are, with all that we may become, we must ever bear in mind that nature is our mother, that in all that is fundamental we are one with that which we see about us; in substance the same, differing only in behavior."

To return to the question with which we set out—"is man superior to nature?"—(as he sometimes feels when he sees her ruthlessness, so shocking to his ethical sense), we must reply that he is not essentially superior, but superior only through higher development. He cannot repudiate his descent.

Follies Champion

Is Slender

Dolores, says Florenz Ziegfeld, was his most effective show girl. And Dolores was five feet seven and a half tall and weighed 118 pounds. She married a millionaire.

"Flo" was asked what there was in Dolores that attracted him. "Nothing," he replied. He is above being susceptible to personal attraction. He picks a girl he knows will please his clients.

The millionaires are seldom so altruistic.

Command Respect

HAS your spirit been broken? Don't you dare stand up for your rights for fear of consequences?

Are you imposed upon daily to the point where your own self-respect has dwindled to its lowest point?

Are you so meek that you don't resent words that should stir you to asserting yourself?

Perhaps you cringe for fear you might lose your job.

Perhaps you are afraid you could not get another position as good.

If you cannot shake yourself out of such a frame of mind, you must continue to smother your pride.

Are you becoming skeptical about your ability?

That is a different thing, and while you doubt your own efficiency you cannot impress others with your ability?

If you know that you can work as well and as fast as the next one, you will stiffen your backbone enough so that you command outward respect, at least.

Tales That Are Told

Popular Notion

THE master was speaking of modern inventions, and he asked, "Do any of you know what the first talking machine was made from?"

Little Fritz put up his hand: "Please, sir, out of a rib."—Lustige Koiner Zeitung, Cologne.

No Rest

A MAN whose whole life had been spent in active business passed to the spirit world.

On arriving there he thought, "Now for some rest and perfect peace."

After quite a short time a spirit tapped him on the shoulder and said, "Excuse me, sir; you are wanted on the outja board."

Tale of a Tail

DURING the summer a certain number of American visitors endeavored to smuggle dogs into England when they landed at Southampton, remarks the London Post.

One day an official encountered a lady who he had every reason to suppose was infringing the law.

"Madame," he told her, "it is contrary to the regulation to bring dogs into this country." The lady protested that she had no dog. "Then, madame," said the official coldly, "I am to understand that the tail hanging down below your coat is your own!"

New York Day by Day

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Broadway is almost an unknown land to men whose fingers are in easy reach of heavy cash. If they want diversion they must seek it elsewhere. They are not permitted to indulge the pleasures of night clubs or other haunts of high rollers.

The banking world especially looks upon the White Way as a subtle temptress. Too many trusted employees have led exemplary lives for years and then looked upon Broadway when it was white. They are next heard of in some non-extraditable country growing beards.

And expert accountants are called in to add up the deficit. If gentlemen of the counting houses wish to have their little frolic now and then they must seek sequestered igloos off the beaten path. The myth has grown that Broadway is dynamite.

The espionage of men entrusted with huge sums is greater than most people realize and even so every once in awhile the defalcation of some long trusted employe emblazons the front pages and it is usually traced back to Broadway and a blond.

So close is the watch it is related that a cashier recently was walking through Forty-second street. He was in a hurry to get into the next street and seeing a theater opened cut through it. It so happened a rehearsal was going on and he emerged among a bevy of beautiful girls at the stage door.

Some camera eye mentally kodaked the picture and next morning he was called before a solemn group of directors. It took him some time to explain the incident satisfactorily. Greater than the danger of the Circe is the danger of the gambling houses.

Gambling untrusses more men who handle cash than a seductive woman. Experience has shown employers few men can accept one loss and quit. The temptation to recover with the cash in such handy reach results in the usual disaster.

New York has recently been declared a "foreign city" which is another uppercut to pouting native sons. It is pointed out by one of those gentlemen who speak on first pages under large cuts of themselves that the metropolis contains more Irish than Dublin, more Germans than any German city save Berlin and Hamburg, more Greeks than Athens, more Italians than any city in Italy outside of Rome, and almost 10 per cent of the Jewish population of the earth. And doubtless more hill-billys than Arkansas.

* * *

New York is one city never affected by criticism. The people who love it most are generally its severest critics. It continues to broaden, shoot up and prosper in face of everything.

* * *

In about six months those of us who have become pop-eyed gazing at ponderous sky brushing towers will behold a new architectural atrocity. It is the Larkin Building, which is going up on Forty-second street between Eighth and Ninth avenues. It will rise dizzily 1,200 feet in the air, which is—wait a minute—yes, just exactly 267 feet higher than Eiffel Tower. There will be 119 stories and 61 elevators, which should satisfy almost anyone who likes their grand buildings tall.

* * *

The Graybar Building, at this writing, is the most spacious office structure in town. A sight seeing wagon megaphonist passing it the other day announced: "This is where a stenographer can shoot the boss and arrive in China before they find the body."

* * *

The Better Service nuisance has hit many of the big buildings about town. One in particular in British fashion has an "enquiry office," where a gorgeous major domo sits on sort of a throne and answers foolish questions. He seems to regard every question a personal affront—and after listening to some inquiries one can scarcely blame him. One man, for instance, asked why the foyer clock was a minute too fast. Another wanted to know where he might secure a second-hand dictionary.

Curiosities of News

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Most people are familiar with the classical remark of the newspaper man that if a dog bites a man that is no news, but if a man bites a dog that is news.

This illustrates the fact that news means something remarkable or something that attracts attention.

Along with the front page items of big events such as the war with China or the Lindbergh flight, there is a fringe constantly of curious news items which we find in the papers.

During the past few weeks I have collected some of these, as follows:

Here is one of a trained flea with a gold collar who escaped from its owner in Santa Cruz, California.

Another item is of an 11-year-old girl who gave birth to a child of six pounds.

A curious stunt by seekers of publicity recently has been sitting on top of flag poles. A number of people have sat on poles for days at a time in an effort to establish a pole-sitting record. Absurdity could hardly go further than this.

A Japanese in Tokyo got his doctor's degree at the Imperial University by writing a thesis on the amours of fleas and lice.

Here is an account of a band made up entirely of saxophone players which has been having a field day with a concert by 500 saxophones.

Then there is an item of a man who arranged his fishing lines so that when he got a bite they would ring a telephone. This is the first instance apparently of a man fishing by telephone.

Into a barber shop at Junction City, Kan., there came four women representing four generations from great-grandmother down and got their hair bobbed. That also was found worthy of a place in the newspaper.

A controversy has been waged about President Coolidge catching fish with worms and we are agreeably informed that Mr. Hoover, who is an expert angler, decides that he will not enter into the controversy as to the advisability of this practice. We should think he wouldn't.

A young married couple in Salt Lake City were bathing when the raft which they used was suddenly blown away into the water by a squall.

It would seem that most preachers might accomplish some good by attending to their business, but one who will stand on his head in the pulpit will get more space in the papers.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Dream Again

HAS one dream failed? Forget it then and build, with brighter dream, again! For life, however stern it seems, is but the fruitage of our dreams. Though firm as rock the structure stand, by dreams, at first, it all was planned. No dream so fair but there can rise a nobler castle to the skies, and loftier spires and turrets still will come from dreamland at man's will. Then waste no strength in vain regret; build up new dream-towers, better yet! Only the craven backward turns and for time's vanished splendors yearns; the craven only dims today with tears for hours passed away; while wiser, braver spirits gain the wonder of fresh dreams' domain. Has one dream failed you? Then forget and dream a vision fairer yet!

THE LIFE OF THOMAS A. EDISON

Text by Arthur J. Palmer
Drawings by Frank Kuchenmeister

EDISON invented both the cylinder and the disc types of phonographs in 1877-78. He developed first the cylinder, then the disc. In perfecting his disc type he spent three years and two million dollars in experimenting. Here he is seen looking for flaws in a disc record.

EDISON'S judgment of reproductions is based entirely on scientific grounds. When a recording does not meet with his approval he may emphasize his rejection, regardless of the reputation of the performer, with the characteristic expression, "Throw it out!"

HE EXPERIMENTED a great deal trying to find a permanent reproducer point, or stylus, that would send forth clear tones. He tried the sapphire point, but it was not hard enough for his hard disk records. Then he turned to the use of the diamond point.

THE phonograph is Edison's favorite invention, and his attitude toward it is one of affection and pride. We wonder if he was able to visualize it in its present-day beauty in those days when he saw it in its first crude form.
